POLICE SEEK KLAN AGENTS AND $107,000 FUND

CASHIER AND HEAD OF INVESTIGATING BUREAU ACCUSED

Warrants Are Issued for N. N. Furney and T. J. McKinnon on Complaint Made by Simmons Agent

TWO MEN DEFENDED
BY PAUL ETHERIDGE

Hearing on Petition to Dissolve Enjoining Order Granted to Simmons to Be Resumed Today.

With the two chief figures of the order openly arrayed against each other and with every indication pointing to a gathering of the forces of the two factions for a death struggle for supremacy, developments in the recent case of the Simmons agent, N. N. Furney, cashier, and T. J. McKinnon, head of the Klan espionage bureau, charging them with larceny after trust of approximately $107,000 in Klan funds.

When deputy marshals of Chief Judge Luther Z. Rosser instituted a search for the two men, Paul S. Etheridge, attorney for the Evans faction, announced that Furney and McKinnon would present themselves in court Thursday morning and will be prepared to make bond in any sum. The attorney admitted that the funds in question were in possession of the two men, but added that they were holding it merely as protection to the Klan itself in order that Simmons be prevented from securing possession of them.

Gives Fake Combination.
The story of how Simmons' brilliant legal coup d'état of Tuesday failed to gain him possession of the funds of the Klan came to light when it was found that Furney, when Simmons seized the imperial palace, gave a fake combination and walked out with an $80,000 Klan check made payable to himself, which had been prepared in advance. Simmons discovered this when locksmen were called in and opened the vault. McKinnon is said to have in his possession $27,000 in recent initiation fees.

Representatives of the imperial emperor Wednesday charged that the two men took this course upon secretly telegraphed orders of Wizard Evans, whom they said was in New York at the time.

Hearing on a petition of Wizard Evans, filed at 2 o'clock Wednesday morning immediately after his return, was begun Wednesday afternoon before Judge E. D. Thomas. Evans petition was for modification of an order previously signed by Judge Thomas, which restrained Evans and leaders of his faction from interfering with Simmons in his control of the Klan.

Filing of this petition, and favor-

WOUNDED BY A LION.
WASHINGTON, April 4.—Today as Herr Darius, who has charge of the lions of the zoo, was attempting to change the animal from one cage to another, one of them turned on him and gave him a fearful wound on the left side of his head and face. The animal was secured, and the wounded man was pulled out and sent to a tent where a physician was called in to dress his head.

NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Prisoner Nixon remains completely prostrate in his cell in the Tombs, and is only kept up by stimulants. He neither eats nor sleeps, but lies on his bed weeping bitterly, and seems dead to all consolation offered by his friends. His wife was with him this afternoon, and the scene in his cell was most painful. Unless some change takes place it is believed he cannot live until the time fixed for his execution. It is reported that the officers of one of the Liverpool steamers, lately arrived, severely condemn the crew shipped from Liverpool. Most of the men are said to have come from the workhouses, and only fifty of those shipped as able-bodied seamen. The officers had to do the greater portion of the ship's work and will refuse to go to sea again with the same crew.

Fourteen Dead in Wake of Tornado

Earl of Carnarvon Is Dead; Did Old Egypt's Curse Kill?

Cairo, April 4.—(By the Associated Press.)—The Earl of Carnarvon died peacefully at 2 o'clock this morning. He was conscious almost to the end. His death was due to blood poisoning through the bite of an insect with the latest development of pneumonia. The death of the Earl of Carnarvon comes soon after the culmination of the exploit that brought him chiefly into public notice—the discovery of the rich tomb of the Pharaoh Tutankhamen in the Valley of the Kings in Egypt by the archaeological expedition which he headed.

While the press of the world was still devoting no small amount of its space to the notable contributions to the world's art and history which Lord Carnarvon and his fellow explorers had uncovered came the news that he had been suddenly stricken down and was lying seriously ill in Cairo from the bite of an insect.

By the public at large the misfortune which the Earl had met was regarded as a lamentable incident of what might happen in a tropical climate such as that of Egypt. But to the credulous students of Egyptian mysticism the news did not come as a surprise.

DID ANCIENT CURSE KILL?
Even before Lord Carnarvon was stricken with blood poisoning, announced as due to an insect bite, there had been talk of the curses laid by the ancient Egyptians with mystic incantations on any who dared disturb the sleep of a Pharaoh. After he was stricken, the old legends spread and hundreds were to be found, not before superstitious, who were ready to believe that the old Egyptian curse had fallen in the rich and famous Englishman.

There were some who even questioned whether it was an insect that had dealt him the poisonous stroke. It was suggested that he might have touched some poisonous object in the tomb itself, or that he had been bitten by a cobra or other venomous snake to revenge the dead king on any who might disturb his rest.

Marie Corelli, the noted writer, recently declared that she called the attention of Lord Carnarvon to the beliefs of Egyptian mysticism and also expressed herself as not surprised at an accident occurring to "those daring explorers who rifle the tombs of dead monarchs." She cited from an ancient book of Egyptian history which gave long lists of the treasures buried with some of the kings, among these "divers secret potions enclosed in boxes in such wise that they who touch them shall not know how they came to suffer."

WIFE HURRIES TO SIDE BY PLANE
Lord Carnarvon was first reported ill on March 19. His wife started by airplane from London to his bedside in Cairo, but was brought down in Paris by a sudden illness that seized her in midair. She finished the trip by boat and rail, arriving to find her husband somewhat better. He was unable to fight off the poison, however, and soon suffered a relapse. This was followed by pneumonia.

The fifth Earl of Carnarvon was born June 26, 1866, and succeeded his father to the Earldom in 1890. His mother was a descendant of the famous Lord Chesterfield, author, statesman and a man of fashion.

His father the fourth Earl of Carnarvon, was British colonial secretary under Lord Derby and while holding this portfolio moved the second reading of the bill for confederation of the British North American colonies. Resigning upon the passage of the Reform bill in 1907, he again became colonial secretary under Disraeli in 1884, serving until 1878. Later he served for two years as Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

The fifth Earl of Carnarvon is survived by a son and a daughter besides his widow. The son holds the title of Lord Northchester. Lord Carnarvon was reported to have spent more than $100,000 maintaining the expedition which finally uncovered the Pharaoh's tomb last December, after seven years of fruitless excavation.

The tomb which contained an unprecedented quantity of objects of the greatest historical value as well as the undisturbed sarcophagus of the Pharaoh, is said to have been the richest find ever unearthed in Egypt.

GOMPERS WARNS G. O. P. AGAINST OPEN SHOP ISSUE

Labor Chieftain Takes Umbrage at Reports That Harding Has Been Advised Against Unionism.

SAYS 1922 STRIKES WERE BOON TO U. S.

Declares They Checked Wave of Wage Reductions, Thus Maintaining People's Purchasing Power.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, April 4.—A warning to the republican party against any sponsoring by it in the next campaign of anti-organized labor issues was issued today by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Gompers said he wanted to make the union position clear, in view of reports, published recently, that President Harding, while in Florida, had been advised by certain friends to endorse "open shop" policies in seeking reelection in 1924.

"Let the issue come, if it is to come," Mr. Gompers declared. "American labor will meet it on any field—political or otherwise. It is only natural that the bankers, big business men, and railroad executives who were responsible for the strikes of the working people last summer should advance these suggestions or proposals."

"Yet the injection of this issue, which cannot be touched by legislation, seems to indicate that some one wants an assumption of power outside and above the law—something that bears comparison to the fascist movement in Italy. I wonder who they will choose to be the Mussolini of American reaction? I am sure the liberty-loving American people are not willing to bend the knee to any such group. Organized labor will live after this group has gone by the boards and been forgotten."

"There has been nothing so fortunate since the close of the war for American life, prosperity and business which checked the wave of wage reductions. The great unemployment just previous was largely due to those wage reductions, since, when the workers' wages are reduced, their buying power is lessened, they consume less, they reduce purchases, and plants shut down. The mainspring of the present revival was in those strikes."

HARDING IS SILENT.

Augusta, Ga., April 4.—The statement issued in Washington tonight by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, warning the republican party against taking a stand in the 1924 campaign in favor of the open shop was received with surprise here tonight by members of President Harding's vacation party.

Mr. Harding himself, had no comment, of course, to make on the labor leader's statement, but other members of the party close to him were plainly surprised. The attitude of the president's associates here is that the republican party will take no such stand.

Bright Given 24 Hours to Leave Town, and Woman Is Forced to Watch While Strap Is Used.

TWO VICTIMS FOUND BY DEPUTY SHERIFFS

Bright Recently Divorced Wife, Who Had Sued Mrs. Pace for Alienating His Affections.

Macon, Ga., April 4.—A band of eight unmasked men, believed to be members of the Ku Klux Klan, kidnapped Mrs. Frederica Pace, of New York, and Lynwood L. Bright, from the former's automobile, at Second and Arch streets at 10 o'clock tonight, carried them to a lonely spot beyond Ocmulgee Park (a negro section) four miles from the city, and there beat Bright almost into insensibility. Mrs. Pace was not horsewhipped as at first reported, but was forced to look on.

Bright was given 24 hours in which to leave the city, under penalty of death. Deputies Find Couple. Sheriff's deputies and motorcycle police combed the highways around Macon for three hours before Deputy Sheriff Hardison and Raley, of the sheriff's force, came upon the couple trudging along a country road, walking toward Atlanta. They had become lost on the lonely road and thought they were going toward Macon.

The couple were brought to police headquarters, where Bright and Mrs. Pace gave their version of the affair. Mrs. Pace said she was not beaten, that the men informed her that they were not going to harm her, but were going to kill Bright. "They said they resented the testimony of a negroess in Bright's suit for divorce Monday, in which charges were made that Mrs. Bright did not keep clean. The negroess was a witness for Bright," said Mrs. Pace.

Woman Badly Scared.
"They didn't harm me, but they scared me most to death," said Mrs. Pace. She begged that the affair be kept from the newspaper, saying that she was going to leave the city at once and did not want further embarrassment.

"They tied my hands and they put a mask on my face," said Mrs. Pace. "I tore the mask from my face and saw them drag Mr. Bright from the car and throw him down on the ground. They first tied his hands and put a gag in his mouth. Then they drew out a lash or a leather strap and beat him repeatedly over the body."

Bright confirmed the report as given by Mrs. Pace and said that the kidnappers also stated that they whipped him because he tried to take his property away from his children.

Bright's Story.
"I offered to give them the home on Second street and keep it in repair for my children for the rest of my life," said Bright, "provided it was not mortgaged or sold. They kept on beating me."

"I have done no wrong," insisted Bright. "Possibly I made a mistake by bringing the negro woman into the case. They told me that they were going from here to Montezuma and get the negro woman witness in the case tonight and kill her."

While the kidnapping and whipping scene was going on Mrs. Lynwood L. Bright, who testified against her husband here on Monday in his suit for divorce, was in her room at a local hotel.

$100,000 IN DAMAGE FOR NORTH CAROLINA

Scores Are Injured—Storm Strikes in Louisiana, North Carolina and at Augusta, Ga.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Alexandria, La., April 4.—The known dead in the tornado which early tonight struck Pineville and vicinity, across the Red River from Alexandria, reached 14, with the arrival here at 10 o'clock tonight of a train bringing the bodies of seven persons killed at Pineville and a small settlement a mile east of that town.

Fifty or more persons were reported injured. Search was being made tonight of the wrecked homes in an area of approximately a mile square in the eastern section of Pineville for the dead, injured and missing.

The lighting system in Pineville was put out of commission by the storm and it was impossible tonight to learn the extent of the damage on account of darkness and the prohibiting of all vehicular traffic on the town's streets. It was estimated that 50 to 60 houses were either completely demolished or badly damaged. Several mercantile buildings were also destroyed.

Some of the injured were reported to be in a serious condition, among them being Homer Boren, whose arm was torn off by flying debris. The most seriously hurt were taken to the United States veterans' hospital at Camp Stafford or brought to local institutions.

The main street in Pineville is strewn with wreckage from destroyed houses and telephone and telegraph wires. Citizens of Alexandria and Pineville are assisting in clearing the streets tonight.

The dead: Harry Marrus, merchant; Enoch Williamson and his 15-month-old infant; Mr. and Mrs. Ed Gates, J. M. Morace and Mrs. Alvin McCann, Miss Bell Jenkins, Mrs. Ed Smith, Mrs. Burnett and four negroes.

Captain Sturdivant denied vehemently that he had ever issued such orders, as reported to Chief Beavers, and declared the reports to that effect were nothing more than machinations of "certain interests" who are trying to promote dissension.

WOUNDED CONVICT USES TWO SHEETS IN PLACE OF ROPE

Man Who Recently Escaped From Federal Prison Here Gets Out of Second Story Window.

CONVICT TAKES SUIT BELONGING TO GUARD

Warden Says Every Effort Will Be Made to Catch Him—Deputy Warden Goes to Athens.

Athens, Ga., April 4.—(Special.)—Gerald Chapman, "million-dollar mail robber," who was badly wounded in his recent unsuccessful bid for liberty after his escape from the federal prison in Atlanta, tonight turned the tables on his captors, and while his guard was out of the room for a few minutes, escaped from the hospital in Athens, where he has been confined since March 28.

He left the hospital by way of a second-story window, 30 feet above the ground, using bed clothing in the place of rope, and to add insult to injury he took with him the clothes of one of his guards. Officers are on the alert, every nearby town has been notified, and special federal prison agents are on their way here.

Warden Dye announced at 11:30 o'clock that Deputy Warden L. J. Fletcher had left for Athens by automobile to direct the search for Chapman.

Chapman recently escaped from the federal prison in Atlanta and later was arrested by Madison county officers after a running battle during which he was seriously wounded. Chapman was guarded by federal Officer McCarty, an attaché of the Atlanta prison. The nurse in charge visited Chapman's room at 9 o'clock and found his temperature to be over 100 and at 9:50 the house physician in making his rounds found that the man had made his escape through a front second-story window, fully 30 feet from the ground. Two sheets taken from the bed on which the man was supposed to be seriously ill, were used in making the escape.

Look Guard's Clothes.
In connection with the discovery that he had gotten away from the hospital it was found that he had taken with him his clothes belonging to McCarty, the federal guard from Atlanta, who was sleeping in the room with him.

Immediately after the house physician, who is Dr. J. C. Proctor, prominent Athens physician, had made the discovery that Chapman had escaped from the hospital, local and county officers were notified, and a search for the notorious bandit, who is so adept at escaping confinement, is already under way. Bloodhounds are scattered throughout this section, stated one of the officers.

In view of the fact that the nurse in making her rounds to get the temperature of the patient was in McCarty's room shortly after 9 o'clock and the physician discovered his absence from confinement at 9:50 which he had only 40 minutes in which to flee, which officers state could not have taken him very far from Athens.

L. S. McCarty, the guard from Atlanta, who has been watching Chapman, told reporters tonight that he left the room shortly before the nurse arrived and at the time asked H. M. Bishop, who is guarding Joe Morello, another federal prisoner, to see that no one entered Chapman's room. With the exception of the nurse who took his temperature and the physician, who discovered his absence, this request was carried out, stated Mr. McCarty said he was at a toilet on the same floor with the prisoner when the escape is supposed to have taken place.

Chapman Complaining.

Last night and today Chapman is reported to have been complaining to the nurses of suffering from severe sweating and it was with the idea of giving him something to ward off these sweats and provide him with a good night's rest that Dr. Proctor went to the room, only to find that the man was not there.

It was told reporters that when the nurse went to the room to get the Chapman man's temperature, he asked that the lights be turned out, as they worried him and that the door be shut. This request was carried out, as they were during the interim between the nurses' call and the physicians' call, a period of not more than 40 minutes that the escape was made.

Hospital authorities say that the man is wearing a blue suit and is suffering from the wounds that he sustained when he was captured near here last week, after a sensational escape from the federal pen in Atlanta.

Bread

—the year 'round food;

3 times a day—365 days—

THIS significant fact means much to the housewife who really tries to serve the household with body-building, blood-making, health-giving food, for there is a reason why you can eat bread three times a day, 365 days in the year—year in and year out—and never tire of it, and

Here's The Reason:

Bread, when correctly proportioned with the right materials and properly baked, contains nutritious elements that feed almost every part of the human body—muscles, cells, blood, bone, brain, etc.—thus rendering it nearly a perfect body food, under which conditions the system does not rebel at its constant use. Of no other food can this be said, with the possible exception of butter. The reason you tire of other foods so quickly is because of their limited food value, over-nourishing one part of the body and neglecting others. Eating bread as you do, three times a day, 365 days in the year, see that it is good—pure, rich, wholesome and properly baked—and surrounding Athens, and authorities of the law were receiving broadcasted reports to be on the lookout for the notorious mail bandit.

Atlanta and Fulton county authorities were notified and a sharp watch was set upon persons and vehicles entering the city.

Warden Dye expressed particular surprise at Chapman's second escape in view of the fact that the bandit had been reported seriously wounded and unable to be transferred from the Athens hospital to the local federal penitentiary.

FIGURES IN SENSATIONAL ESCAPE FROM PRISON.

Gerald Chapman, prisoner at the federal penitentiary, sentenced to help in a million dollar New York mail robbery, together with Frank Grey, serving a sentence for forgery, effected an escape from the penitentiary early Tuesday morning, March 27, but were captured near Athens Wednesday after a pistol fight with officers. Chapman was wounded in the face and was taken to a private sanitarium in Athens to be treated. Grey was brought back to Atlanta, and returned to prison.

The men were supplied with implements to remove barriers in their way while making their escape, and early Tuesday morning crept into an adjoining room the fact that the escape was being made. Within a short time afterward, detailed description of Chapman was being flashed all about the country.

BUTCHAVICH DIED SATURDAY MORNING.

Warsaw, April 4.—Monsieur Butchavich, who had been arrested by the Russian soviet government, was executed at 4 o'clock Saturday morning. He was taken to the cellar beneath the Cheka building, according to advices reaching here, and made to stand with his executioner behind him. He was shot with a revolver through the back of the head.

While efforts are being made to ascertain what happened after the execution, the only information thus far vouchsafed is that the body was removed to an unexplained spot.

RUSSIA SILENT ON INCIDENT.

Moscow, April 4.—(By the Associated Press.)—The execution of Vicar General Butchavich appears to be a closed incident so far as the Russian government is concerned. From Catholic sources it is learned that no reply has been made by the government to the request of the Roman Catholics of Moscow for permission to bury the vicar general in accordance with the rites of the church.

Beyond a resolution adopted by the Kharlov Polish workmen approving the execution, no mention of the affair is made by the Moscow press.

JOE SHOWS POLICE EASY WAY TO KEEP OUT OF JAIL CELL

Several members of the Atlanta police department and Recorder George E. Johnson would like very much to hold a conference with Joe Holderness, negro, who disappeared suddenly while registering in at police station Tuesday night. At the time Chief Beavers was in the assembly room through which the negro had to pass.

Holderness with several companions were arrested by Call Officers Crankshaw and Dancho, on a charge of disorderly conduct. They were taken to police headquarters and while other members of the party were having their names entered upon the docket, Holderness walked out, unobserved.

A search of the premises, inside and out, failed to disclose any trace of him. A hasty investigation was held to determine whether Holderness had actually been among those charged. Although friends expected the police to search for him, he was not seen. His assistant asserted positively that he was among those present.

Holderness' companions were arraigned in Recorder Johnson's court Wednesday afternoon and assessed a fine of $11. Police are continuing their search for Holderness.

the country road, Bright appeared to be suffering from the lashes across the body. He asked that the sheriff's deputies examine his wounds. No examination was made, however, but it was understood that a doctor was called for Bright later.

Bright said that he told his kidnappers that he couldn't leave his kidnap in twenty-four hours, as ordered to do. He asked for the rest of the week to close up his business affairs, he said. The request was refused, he explained, and the lash was again applied.

Chases Mrs. Pace

Late this afternoon, according to R. Douglas Feagin, attorney for Bright, Mrs. Pace was sitting in her automobile on the principal business street of Macon when Mrs. Bright, walking down the street, noticed her. Mrs. Pace told Mr. Feagin, he said, that Mrs. Bright made a face at her and then reached for her bag as if to get something. Mrs. Pace did not know what she was doing, he said, and immediately jumped from the automobile and started across the street in a run, followed by Mrs. Bright.

Mrs. Pace was only a short distance from her hotel, but before she reached the hotel, she said, Mrs. Bright stopped and spoke to a tall man, who looked at Mrs. Pace and Mrs. Bright, and the street to a Cadillac automobile.

Mrs. Bright gave up the chase, so Mrs. Pace told, and turned from her course as if to go into a motion picture theatre. A few minutes later Bright returned to the automobile

To Hunt for Liquor Without Warrants

Lexington, Ky., April 4.—R. F. Dunn, of Paris, and J. W. M. J. Cochran, of the Northern district, in order to search the machine without a warrant and obtain evidence of alleged liquor law violation.

The agents asserted sixty gallons of moonshine whisky was found in the car.

When sighted by officers, the car was in Nelson county, in the district of Judge Hyams, who recently ruled agents must obtain warrants to stop and search automobiles. The machine was followed to a point near Harrodsburg.

Baxter, the driver, refused to stop in response to a command from the officers, and one of the agents leaped to the running board of his machine and forced him to halt the car. He was held in jail for $2,000 for illegal transportation of liquor, and an equal sum on charges of resisting an officer, when arraigned before a United States commissioner.

His companion was charged with illegal transportation of liquor and his bond fixed at $1,000.

WHY SOUTHERN MORTGAGE BONDS

Pay up to 7%

EVERY year that goes by witnesses a further development of Southern resources and industry, adding to the strength and stability of first mortgage investments in the South. Every year likewise sees an increasing amount of capital poured into the South by outside investors who have been impressed by the soundness and prosperity of that section. History is repeating itself—the history of how a rich territory gradually finances itself by attracting the money of far-sighted investors in other parts of the country.

When natural resources and trade are fully developed, when people everywhere are thoroughly familiar with the South as a safe investment field, it will no longer be possible to obtain a more liberal rate of interest on Southern investments than can be had elsewhere. That is why our First Mortgage Bonds, secured by income-producing buildings in Southern cities, offer a real investment opportunity, with an interest rate up to 7%. These bonds are created and safeguarded in precisely the same way as our issues secured by structures in other sections. Mail the coupon for our descriptive booklet, "Creating Good Investments."

Interest Payment Service: Investors holding Miller Bonds, interest on which is due next month, can cash their coupons immediately by presenting them, personally or by mail, at any of our offices.

POVERTY DRIVES SANDERS TO SELL IMPURE BUTTER

C. A. Sanders, of Ellenwood, Ga., was fined $20 by Judge George E. Johnson Wednesday afternoon upon charges of profiting and selling impure butter.

The officers stated that the law required butter not to contain more than 16 per cent water and that the mixture Sanders was charged with marketing contained 61 per cent.

Sanders admitted the charges, saying that he was driven to the deed by poverty. He declared he was the sole support of eight children and a wife and was unable to clothe and feed them properly.

The officers stated that the selling of impure butter was a federal offense and would prefer government charges against him.

Students Honor Memory of Negro Waiter at Tech

College Men Raise Fund for the Funeral of Lewis Brown.

When youth holds undisputed sway in the veins and when one is dashing gayly on with the current of college life—death seems far removed and rarely clogs the merry wheel of boyhood pursuits with its cold hand.

But when Lewis Brown died things were different at Tech.

Lewis, as all who patronize the Tech mess hall know, had for 23 years been an institution at the Atlanta seat of learning. For a full season of years and more his black face had grinned a cheerful welcome to hungry, stampeding crowds who simultaneously filled themselves with his mess and provender and the wisdom of the sages and passed on to make way for new hordes of famished young manhood.

From a little school with a student body of 300, Lewis saw Tech grow to her present greatness. And all through the years, deferential and Lewis wore a smile and looked after comforts here and spoke kind words there.

Wednesday morning the Tech men learned that Lewis had bravely answered the last great mess call. And it was said that money was needed to send the body back to South Carolina, the place of his birth.

A hasty collection was taken, and honored in the memory of a thousand college men, old Lewis will go home to his eternal resting place in state.

DRIVE IS STARTED AGAINST ILLEGAL PAREGORIC SALES

A campaign against the sale of paregoric to narcotic addicts was started in Atlanta Wednesday afternoon with the arrest of two druggists who had been illegally purveying the product which addicts are said to use when they are unable to secure other forms of narcotics.

T. E. Middlebrook, chief narcotic inspector, instituted the campaign, and secured a number of warrants. Both druggists arrested furnished bonds and were released.

GOVERNOR ASKS HEARING FOR BOY AT UNIVERSITY

John T. Roberts, formerly a law student at the University of Georgia, who was expelled recently on charges of improper conduct by the student council of the institution, Wednesday appeared before Governor Thomas W. Hardwick and asked the latter to aid him in securing a hearing before officials of the university, which, he claimed, would prove his innocence.

According to Roberts' appeal, Governor Hardwick in a letter to officials of the university requested them to allow the young student to appear before them and submit his case. The governor stated that his interest in the case was purely personal and not political.

Roberts, who resides in Miller county, recently broke into the newspaper lunchlight when he obtained a writ of injunction in the Clarke county superior court at Athens, to restrain the dean of the institution from expelling him after the student council had found him guilty of improper conduct.

"It is true that I was with a bunch of students who had been drinking while attending a theater in Athens," declared Roberts in his conversation with the governor, "but I can prove that I had not taken a drink nor was I guilty of any disturbance. The student council took blanket action against every student in the party without an investigation and ordered me expelled, although one other student and myself had been previously exonerated by the dean."

Seymour and Oetgen To Face Preliminary Trial on April 16

Paul W. Seymour and E. O. Oetgen, former Atlanta produce brokers who were reported arrested in Tampa last week on a charge of using the mails to defraud will be given preliminary hearing before the commission in Tampa on April 16, according to a telegram received Wednesday by Joe P. Johnston, post-office inspector in charge from Inspector C. E. Odom, detailed from the Atlanta office to supervise proceedings which are expected to result in bringing the two men to Atlanta for trial.

Seymour and Oetgen, the authorities stated, formerly operated produce houses in Atlanta, receiving consignments of produce for which they never made payment. Both men are being held in default of $2,500 bond.

HOME SHOW READY Odom to Repeat Feature Exhibit at Exposition.

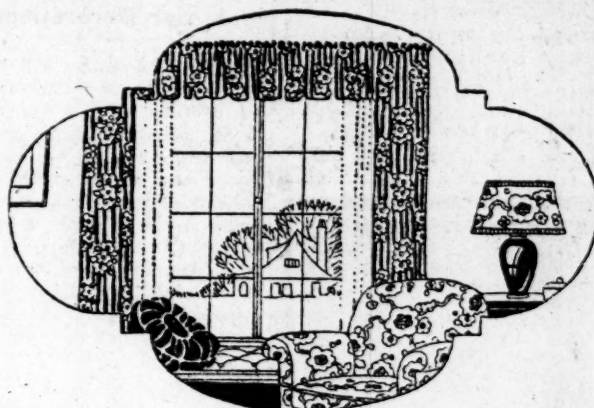

Final plans for the "Own Your Home" exposition, to occupy the spot light of attention all next week at the Auditorium, are being made, and officials announced that all will be in readiness Monday for the greatest and best exhibition of its kind in Atlanta's history.

Exhibits this year will be considerably more numerous and elaborate than last year, it is said. In addition to the names of exhibitors already announced, it was stated Wednesday that Manager James E. Odom, of the C. A. Dahl company, will again stage an elaborate landscape booth near the main entrance to the show.

Mr. Odom's exhibit last year was one of the distinct features of the show. This year, he stated, he will show a miniature modern home with complete landscape surroundings, and in addition will have two little garden girls on hand to lend an attractive touch of life to the scene.

Many other feature exhibits are promised, and officials are confident of the overwhelming success of the exposition from every viewpoint.

REVISION IS URGED IN APPEALS SYSTEM

Million-Dollar Saving Annually Would Result From Move, Hunt Declares.

More than a million dollars could be saved annually in taxes if the present system of appealing court cases could be revised on an economical basis by condensing all legal documents setting forth claims of litigants to facts that have direct bearing on the case and the law pertaining to these facts, J. Mallory Hunt, president of the Southern Motor Finance corporation, told members of the Masonic club at their weekly luncheon Wednesday.

"The attorneys should then present the documents to the judge who tries the case and apply for a writ of error," he said, "and if the judge refuses the application, the attorney may then go to the judge of the higher court, who may or may not sustain the motion. The last appeal would be for the supreme court judge to fill bench hearing with three judges whose decision would be final and the trial re-opened or closed."

Mr. Hunt explained that this whole procedure would involve only about one week's time, whereas, under the present system, a decision is often delayed for months and years while an enormous mass of evidence is gathered and bound in the legal publications of the state.

He pointed out that this chaotic system is costing the state hundreds of thousands of dollars in the cost of stenographers alone are paid 20 cents for every one hundred words in the documents, and $7,000 annually could be dispensed with under this system.

George Eubanks, president of the club, and Robert Jones, Jr., were elected to represent the Atlanta Masonic club at the National Masonic club convention June 11 in Boston, Mass.

The Georgia Tech Glee club and the Yellow Jacket Four entertained the club with vocal and instrumental musical selections. It was announced that a unique program of entertainment had already been arranged by the Fellowship club of Palestine lodge, that has charge of next Wednesday's program.

JULIAN FIELD RESTS IN OAKLAND TODAY

Prominent Cotton Seed Broker Dies at His Residence Wednesday.

Funeral services for Julian Field, prominent cotton seed and fertilizer broker, who died Wednesday morning at his home, 805 Peachtree street, will be held at 11 o'clock this morning from the residence.

Dr. Henry Alford Porter, pastor of the Second Baptist church, will officiate. Burial will be in Oakland. The pallbearers: Richard Elliott Miller, Lee Ashcraft, Hiram Melone, R. S. Melone, E. A. Peoples and Tom Lawson. H. M. Patterson & Son are in charge.

Mr. Field, one of the best-known cotton seed brokers in the state, was one of the founders of the Cotton Seed Crushers' Association of Georgia, and rendered invaluable service to that organization.

He was a member of the firm of Peoples & Field and Julian Field & Co., dealers in cotton seed products. Mr. Field came to Atlanta 30 years ago.

He was a member of the Piedmont Driving club and the Capital City club. While in school at the University of Georgia he was a member of the S. A. E. fraternity.

He had been ill for about six months, and his condition became serious about a week ago.

In addition to the many other organizations Mr. Field was connected with, he was one of the most active members of the Second Baptist church. He married Miss Adeline Adair, a daughter of the late A. D. Adair, Sr. She survives him, along with two daughters—Mrs. A. D. Adair and Hooper Alexander, both of Atlanta; two sisters-in-law, Mrs. S. G. Bonn, of California, and Mrs. C. M. ## Elks Offer Prizes For Decorations During 1923 Meet

Also Offer Prizes for Window Display and Exterior Decorations.

A thousand dollars will be offered in prizes by the 1923 Convention board of the Atlanta Lodge of Elks to the merchants of the city for the best decorations on the exteriors of stores and special window decorations during the Elks' convention in July. A special effort is being made by the convention board to have a street display during the course of the convention that has never been equaled in Atlanta and which will rival the best that has ever been done in any other convention city in the country.

Two divisions in the competition have been arranged so as to give both the large and small merchants an equal opportunity to secure prizes. The first division embraces all store and office exteriors, and a first prize of $250 is being offered to the company which stages the most effective and unique display on its building. The second prize is $150 and the third prize $100.

For special window decorations the prizes are similar, $250 for first, $150 for second and $100 for third. Awards will be made strictly on the originality and effectiveness of each particular store, and it is felt that every establishment in the city can be a contender for these prizes.

Virgil Shepard has been awarded a contract for supplying decorations for principal business streets.

The convention board is making this prize offer at this time in the hopes of interesting every merchant in the city in arranging for special displays during the Elks' convention.

John S. McClelland, chairman of the Convention board.

Mother Why Don't You Take The Newer Form of Iron?

And Be Strong and Well and Have Nice Rosy Cheeks Instead of Being Nervous and Irritable All the Time and Looking So Haggard and Old?—The Doctor Gave Some To Susie Smith's Mother and She Was Worse Off Than You Are and Now She Looks Just Fine

THE CHILD'S APPEAL

There can be no Beautiful, Healthy, Rosy-Cheeked women without Iron."

J. F. SULLIVAN, M. D.

"Nine out of every ten women who are weak, nervous and run-down, could increase their health, strength and energy, and feel and look years younger, in many instances in ten days' time, if they would only get a little more iron in their blood."

"The most startling thing in the practice of medicine is to see how many people suffer from iron deficiency and do not know it. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without iron, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you the proper amount of good. As a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly-looking."

If you are not strong and well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can walk or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two tablets of Nuxated Iron three times a day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.

GEORGIA AND TEXAS.

In connection with a lengthy and comprehensive discussion of the industrial awakening throughout the south, referring specifically to the vigorous get-away of "Georgians, Incorporated," recently organized to unselfishly promote manufacturing in all sections of the state, Thomas Flinty, Jr., of the staff of The Dallas News, says as to Texas—

"The movement for new industries, especially cotton mills, in Texas has assumed such proportions that it is strikingly reflected in the trade journals. For example, in the March 17 number of The Textile Institute, the 'New Mills' department contains the news of the starting of nine new cotton mills, seven of these being in Texas, and the 'Expansion and Improvement' column shows that two out of twenty-one cotton mill projects of that classification are in Texas.

"But this new industrial campaign is by no means confined to Texas. It appears to be going, or at least starting, in Georgia and South Carolina, where such industries already are in operation.

The truth is Texas is making rapid development strides from within more than from without, although it is encouraging by sane legislation and a definite tax system the investment of outside capital.

This, too, followed a period of industrial stagnation in that state brought about by reactionary, selfish legislation as to corporations, and by the usual cycle of radicalism that infests every state sooner or later.

Three or four years ago Texas realized what Georgia must realize, that the investment of capital follows stabilization of laws, and does not anticipate a "reform" that is in the making. When Georgia stabilizes her tax laws, outlaws the annual legislative session, and permits progressive conservatism to direct its affairs, then will outside capital be the more easily attracted.

Again, Texas is doing today what North Carolina did in the beginning of her great industrial era—utilizing community capital for community building, and not depending wholly upon imported capital or imported business acumen.

The small mill, locally owned, is an outstanding feature in North Carolina mill development.

And, as these local mills have proven profitable, bringing substantial earnings to the local people who own them, the incomes from earnings have been reinvested in the same communities, in enlargements or in other and balancing industries, until practically every town in that state has become a town of stocks.

That is what Georgia must do in conjunction with its activities in attracting outside capital. Georgia must be sold to Georgia as well as sold to the mill operators of Massachusetts who are seeking the south on account of labor, climate and proximity to raw product. Every community should have a community-owned industry best suited to the production of that community.

The whole discussion is interesting in the outstanding fact that Georgia is not alone in this industrial activity, and this makes Georgia's move all the more important, and all the more earnest.

CIVILIZATION SHOCKED.

The execution of Vicar General Buchkavitch at Moscow by the soviet government of Russia was not only a direct slap at the civilized governments of the world, which had protested, but was a reflection of the rule of anarchy in authority over civilization. Its significance rests in that fact.

signor Buchkavitch was a high dignitary of the Catholic church. The religious question did not enter into it. The fact is, most of the powers that protested are Protestant, and certain it is that many of the greatest Protestant organizations in the world, including those in America, were among those making the most vigorous protest.

Overshadowing all questions of religion, and placing it upon the same basis as if the executed prelate had been an Episcopalian, or a Methodist, or a Baptist, or a Presbyterian, the protests were universal and non-sectarian, because the civilized world believed, and believes today, that the charges of high treason were not only trumped up for political effect, but that every effort at a fair trial was thwarted.

International morality has been shocked without measure by this atrocity in the name of the law.

THE FISH LAWS.

Frank J. Rhodes, state game and fish commissioner, has issued a strong and commendable appeal to the people of the state to aid in the preservation of fish. He declares the laws are being violated in many sections.

The preservation of game and fish, according to the laws created to conserve the basic supplies for the future, without withholding the opportunities for sportsmanship from the true huntsmen and fishermen, and without unreasonably restricting the commercialization of fishing, is a matter of much greater importance than the average layman may think.

Until a few years ago shad were plentiful in the streams of the state. They are scarce, and rapidly disappearing under the flagrant violations of the laws regulating the fishing for shad.

Despite Georgia's long seacoast, and the multiplicity of inland streams that flow into the Atlantic, the fact is most of the fish sold in the markets of Atlanta and elsewhere are imported from other states, most of them coming from Gulf ports, and no small amount from the east. This is inexcusable, and the flagrant abuse of law by which the fish supply is cut down in Georgia is costing the consumers a great deal of money and is taking from the state its proper place in the fishing industry.

This same spirit of ruthless disregard for conservation was manifest a few years ago in the reckless slaughtering of the yellow pines, without science, without regard for this potential influence in the future welfare of the state, and today the home builders are paying the penalty for that recklessness. Industry—all building indeed—is paying the penalty.

The appeal of Commissioner Rhodes follows in part:

"I desire to call the attention of the people of the inland counties of the state to the advantage of their co-operating with this department in the enforcement of the act of the general assembly of Georgia, which prohibits the use of nets, seines, traps or any plan or device for the stoppage or collection of fish, from February 1 to July. All of these devices must be removed from all creeks, streams and inland waters of the state.

"I would also call your attention to the catching of shad, which is prohibited from sundown Friday to sunrise Monday morning, except with hook and line. This department has taken steps to open up the mouths of the lower parts of all the rivers of the state; that is, to see that no nets, seines or any plans or devices for the stoppage or collection of fish are used in the streams at these points during the closed time, in order that the shad and other fish may have free migration for the benefit of the people of the upper counties.

"I have recently written to all the game wardens of every county in which the streams pass to the coast, instructing them to see that all nets, seines, traps and other obstructions are removed from the streams of their counties as required by the law. If this is done, and the people of the different counties co-operate in the enforcement of the law, and the apprehension and conviction of those who violate the law, it will mean abundant fish throughout the state."

Laws are created to be enforced, and if they are not enforced our system of government fails. The laws governing hunting and fishing are just as important, in their sphere, as other laws, and they should be observed by the people.

old days 'neath
the chinaberry
tree:
"Seven up" on the old pine box, an
"deal a hand fer me!"

II.
At first they didn't know me—fer time had slipped away.
An' I came back with a beaver-hat,
an' hair a little gray.
But something in my voice brought back the old days, as I said, an',
When I bellowed: "If it's 'seven up',
jes' deal a hand fer me!"

III.
Doc Brown riz up an' shouted: "It's him—it's him, fer shore!"
An' he left a customer thar,
An' others came aroun' me, an' eyed me, up an' aroun'.
"It's checkers, an' it's 'seven up' that brought him back to town!"

IV.
An' I said: "You shure have hit it!"
—they wuz glad as glad could be.
They made room at the old pine box,
an' dole well haped to me.
An' such a lively game it wuz! an'
this here will I say:
If ever Hearsy wuz trumps in life,
they shure wuz trumps that day!

Sermon to Men.
Writing in The Independence Examiner, William Southern hauls the men over the coals in this fashion—
"Because the men do most of the writing which is read by the public and most of the public speaking, it has come to be generally thought the women are far vainer of their personal appearance than men. This is true only to the extent that women have more pride in their personal appearance and hate dirt worse than the men. As far as vanity is concerned, most men are as vain as a turkey cock. Sometimes they try to hide this weakness, but if you want to start a lifelong friendship just tell a man how well he looks, how nice his new overcoat is, or how becoming his new Easter outfit. Women have long known this weakness and use it in the management of their husbands and sons and sweethearts. A man is entirely pliable in the hands of a smart woman. I hate to think what his feelings would be if he knew just how that attractive woman was really thinking behind the smiling mask of adoring admiration."

Songs of April.

I.
Singin' songs of April,
And hopin' that the May won't rim with ice the blossoms
And blow the birds away.
Singin' songs of April,
With blue skies for the gray.

II.
Singin' songs of April,
He's been so long away.
We're waitin' him to show us
Where the reddest roses stay.
And make a world of garlands
To pacify Miss May!

"All candidates," says a Missouri editor, "need two hats—one to toss into the ring, and the other to talk through."

Brother Williams.
You got de road ter travel,
Even if you goes alone;
Solomon had his wisdom.
But you got ter have yo' own.

The Whole Thing.
The Kansas City Star says that, speaking of a Prosperity Drive, a man asked: "How come you are not in the black ranks of the blues?
Everybody else is in town is." "I'm the army," replied the other.

Winter is merely hiding out in the hills left of the blues, to give Spring a frosty surprise party when she goes to the picnic.

The Hosts of April

Behold young April's banners
Upon the bows of spring!
In every glade and marshland
Green flags are shimmering.
The great blue armies of the Lord
Thunder, and stir and sing.

In yellow, bright battalions
The hosts of April come;
There is a sounding chorus,
The faint tap of a drum.
And in the wood's deep bivouac
A strange delirium.

Now every shy earth creature
Advances in the dawn,
From the black ranks of winter
Have suddenly withdrawn;
A glory marches through the world
And camps upon my lawn.

I hear the papers playing
Upon their golden flutes;
Hark to the martial music
Of all the forest lutes.
A myriad symphonies crash and beat,
And the glad world salutes.

Behind the flowery victories,
Close in their royal train,
I see another army
Sweep over hill and plain—
It is a purple regiment
With slanting swords of rain.

O passionate invasion
Desired, long-dreamed-of time!
Rush through our hearts with rapid, Erase life's dust and grime:
For now the heavens have bent to earth.

In the year's silver prime,
There never moved an army
With such a lordly swing:
The waiting earth is jubilant
At such sweet conquering.
Victoriously come once more
The valiant hosts of spring!

TALIAFERRO COUNTY TO BUILD HIGHWAY

Crawfordville, Ga., April 4.—(Special.)—The county commissioners of Taliaferro county, in regular session, Tuesday decided to build a highway along the line of the Georgia railroad from Crawfordville easterly to the Warren county line. This proposed road is to be built altogether on the private lines of the Georgia railroad and will have the effect of eliminating several grade crossings, some of which are very dangerous.

Plans have been made to begin work on this new road as soon as possible and it is expected the work will advance rapidly. Under the plan with the state highway commission, the county cannot be used in the work of building the highway. The distance will be about five miles.

Just In Passing!

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON

Tomorrow, April 6, is the sixth anniversary of the declaration of war on Germany by the United States. That declaration was made by the representatives of the people in congress by overwhelming—almost unanimous—vote, in which party lines were stricken, and the political complexion of the administration forgotten.

The work of mobilizing the American forces, numbering more than 2,000,000 young men in excess of the country's standing army, proceeded with a speed and a patriotic co-ordination of official and private resources in a manner that challenged the admiration of the world.

The process of making soldiers, officers and privates, out of the inexperienced but quickened blood of the young manhood of the nation, was made the easier because of the hearty co-operation of almost everybody and every interest, and particularly because of the impelling call of duty that not only gripped the American public, but particularly gripped the young men themselves, who were called upon to shoulder arms, suffer, sacrifice and die that "the world might be made safe for democracy."

Perhaps history does not record a greater universal impulse than that which followed the call to this new but unchallenged opportunity for service to country and humanity.

So marked was the enthusiasm of the young men of the country that tens of thousands of them rushed into volunteer service without awaiting their turn in the routine of the selective system.

Though the task of recruiting and training so great an army to meet a war condition that had already tried the souls of men for three years, and had already winded the great nations of Europe, was herculean, the system employed, the co-operating sympathy of a war congress, with the exception of a small group of obstructionists in the senate, stood heartily and unreservedly behind the commander-in-chief and the countless private agencies among the older soldiers of civil life who should keep the fires burning at home, all combined to make it memorable for its success in the history of the world.

War taxes, unheard of levies upon the man power and the money power of the nation, were imposed without a challenge and met without a murmur.

Two million men were transported 3,000 miles across the seas with such a negligible casualty, despite the menace of the submarine, that the glory of the American navy in this one achievement will live throughout the ages to come.

On the other side the American boys were quickly thrown into action, for already the back of France was pressed to the wall, and the other forces of the allies, fighting as valiantly, and with stoic heroism, were weakening under the strain of the conflict.

For two years the Germans had held the old military roads running north out of Paris, and with the French capital as the final objective had pressed toward that goal.

Twice within the very shadow of the great monument that marks the tomb of Napoleon they had been repelled by the almost superhuman effort of the allies, abetted on one occasion by the Paris police that threw a barricade along the south banks of the Marne that held the invaders at bay.

In the early spring of 1918 the Germans and Austrians held Belem Wood, just back of Chateau-Thierry, with seemingly impregnable forces.

The French and British combined had tried to rout them without success, but they held them there, preventing their crossing the Marne and making the rush into Paris, only a few miles distant.

Then it was that the Americans, headed by a regiment of marines and by the famous Rainbow division in which many Georgians were enlisted, with dauntless courage and a fighting spirit that echoed in applause around the world, swarmed down upon the bitious. There, for example, is Isham Jones. Not so long ago he was a mule driver in a coal mine. He took up saxophone and in four years has made $800,000. Hiale Byers, who plays with Paul Whiteman, makes a salary of $25,000 a year. And Ed Lewis, who alternates with the clarinet, makes the salary of a bank president.

I thought one that was shiny and everything and decorated up with snags. The clerk—the old twit—told me it was very easy to master. So I carried it home, feeling as guilty as a bank man who discovers he's wearing his hat on feet.

I closed all the windows and doors, unpacked the instrument and started to blow just to test it. My cheeks ballooned, my eyes bulged, chest heaved and then something snapped. "There, daggonne it," I thought, "goes a brain." But I had merely forgot to uncock a stop.

That night I hid it under the bed and dreamed of thrilling the multitudes with "Three O'Clock in the Morning"—muttering it now and then with one of those gold derbies over the top of my head.

The next morning I went to a "Saxophone College" in the Fifties. We began on a few simple notes but all I could make my mouth utter was "pucker." Realize now I could never become teacher's pet in a saxophone school. He said I did everything wrong. I didn't hire him to tell me that.

Anyway I gave him $5 and tripped out. The following afternoon I was back. That was determined and headstrong. This time I had a new teacher. I knew he was going to be grand by his pop eyes. He gave me two notes to play over. I practically wore them down to a whisper and was almost crying for more when he told me right out he didn't think I'd ever get the hang of it. But he took my $5.

Now all I have for my experience is an unwelcome saxophone and a decided lip.

My experience, however, as a saxophonist should not discourage the am-

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

NOTIONS ABOUT BREATHING.

Another Harley street specialist—or possibly it was a great French specialist—Harley street and France are two fertile fields for the foreign correspondent—has announced that all the fat folks have to do if they want to grow thin, or all the skinny ones need do to stay thin, is breathe deeply. Now, please don't push or shove. There is plenty of air for all; you make take your time about it. I fully approve of breathing deeply. I am convinced that most people don't do enough of it for the good of their health. But I have a few gallons of cold water to dash over this Harley street or this French fancy. Briefly, then, let me say that, fat or thin, you may breathe yourself dizzy without much risk of any appreciable alteration of your state of nutrition.

Deep breathing is the old-fashioned delusion, so far as any beneficial or healthful effect is concerned, it is akin to hoisting oneself with one's own boot straps. It is a stunt based on physiology.

Every five or ten years some scientist discovers that deep breathing will grow hair on a bald head or at any rate will help hair growing on a bald head. This might or might not be true. Deep breathing is absolutely harmless if accompanied with the normal physiological activity—exercise. As an exercise in itself it is far inferior to a walk around the room or a run upstairs. The only kind of deep breathing that may be considered healthful is that which is connected with vigorous exercise. And my advice to the health seeker is to enjoy the exercise but pay no attention whatever to the breathing. Breathing is an involuntary, automatic function and is best left to take care of itself. It is regulated by the involuntary or automatic nervous system over which we have no conscious control.

One can, of course, breathe more deeply than usual by special effort and attention, for a very limited time, a few minutes. But inevitably, if this increased breathing is continued, the serious effort, unaccompanied with active general exercise, there follows a period of shallow breathing which compensates for the hyperventilation. The breathing is so shallow that the long run you are precisely where you were at the beginning. You've gained nothing whatever (the trilling and the shouting involved in the breathing effort doesn't count). It isn't physiological. It isn't sense.

Administrations were changed at the polls, and the new administration proclaimed a policy of American isolation from all the problems arising out of a war it had helped to win, and from sympathetic co-operation in setting the European house in order after the conflict, and on the basis of fixing the principles for which it fought secure in the international affairs of the world.

Passions and prejudices, accentuated by natural post-war conditions, were fanned and inflamed by political demagogues.

In the international reparations commission it refused to participate, although the creditor of the allies to the extent of $11,000,000,000.

It would have nothing to do with any of it, although its refusal to finish the job it had so enthusiastically entered was not only a flagrant abuse of the amenities of comradeship, but jeopardized the peace of the world that millions of young men had given their lives to establish.

Although the markets of Europe could only be opened and the purchasing power of overseas nations rehabilitated by this evidence of co-operative helpfulness in putting into effect what it fought for and had won, still its policy of "backs upon its allies" continued.

The effect was quickly apparent in American production. Prices began to summarily fall. Farmers were brought to their knees. Then it was that an aroused congress asserted itself at the polls in 1922, and now the attitude is softening, and the president is calling for American participation in the world court provided in the treaty of Versailles.

Its participation in the friendly settlement of the reparations differences, however, is still withheld, and strategic as is its position, these conditions can never be settled, and the economic stability of Europe and even of America can never be assured, until it does participate.

Not with men or money, but with that arbitrament of selfish democracy to the cause of democracy that America of all nations must show to make the victory of the war worth while.

BITS OF NEW YORK LIFE

BY O. O. MINTYRE

New York, April 4.—There is no New York so long ago as there is for sale cheap. In fact I'd trade it for a couple of marbles and a skipping rope. I've saxed my last note.

Disillusionment came quickly. Three weeks ago I embarked on a career of saxophone. I had visions of all six of the Brown Brothers turning green and begging for mercy.

I thought one that was shiny and everything and decorated up with snags. The clerk—the old twit—told me it was very easy to master. So I carried it home, feeling as guilty as a bank man who discovers he's wearing his hat on feet.

I closed all the windows and doors, unpacked the instrument and started to blow just to test it. My cheeks ballooned, my eyes bulged, chest heaved and then something snapped. "There, daggonne it," I thought, "goes a brain." But I had merely forgot to uncock a stop.

HOLLOMON TALKS

ABOUT FARMING AT BURNS CLUB

James A. Hollomon, of The Constitution, addressed the Burns club at their clubhouse Wednesday night upon farming conditions in Georgia. Mr. Hollomon made an interesting talk, chiefly devoted to the boll weevil. He declared that the boll weevil instead of being a terrible liability to the farmers of the south would eventually prove to be one of its greatest benefactors.

Dr. Soule, president of the State Agricultural college, also addressed the meeting upon farming conditions. He declared that the competent man was being driven from the plow by the lack of co-operation from the cities, and by the poor markets for his product.

Mr. Hollomon in his address declared that the Turner county plan was the thing destined to save the southern farmer from chaos and disaster. The Turner county plan advocates diversification for the farmer, and has, it is said, put that county back in its former prosperous state.

A number of short talks were made by members of the club. A paper was read upon the subject, "Burns, a Farmer."

SPRING EDITION PHONE DIRECTORY TO BE DELIVERED

The spring edition of the telephone directory, consisting of more than 40,516 copies, will be delivered to Atlanta subscribers beginning early Thursday morning. It is expected that every subscriber in Atlanta will be supplied with a copy by Saturday afternoon.

Since January 1, a total of 703 new telephones have been added to the system in Atlanta. There were 39,813 telephones on January 1, and 40,516 on April 1. Telephone officials expect a continuation of this growth during the year, and an active construction work is in progress in all parts of the city to provide facilities for new subscribers.

The directory appears this time in new dress and contains information about the use of the new machine switching telephones which are to be placed in service during the summer. District Manager Carter stated there is great public interest in the new system, and complete information about it in the directory is given so that everyone can understand how to use the new telephone properly.

Mr. Bowden urges subscribers to use the new book as soon as they receive it and to destroy old books because hundreds of telephone numbers have been changed in preparation for the introduction of the machine switching system.

TRAIN PASSENGERS RIDING ON PASSES BARRED DAMAGES

Passengers on trains, riding on passes, may not sue the company operating the train in the event of an accident, Judge W. D. Ellis ruled Wednesday in Fulton superior court.

The ruling was made in the case of Ernest Tharpe and Joe Crawford, negroes, who filed a damage suit for $20,000 against the Central of Georgia Railroad company for injuries received in a wreck of the Jonesboro accommodation train July 5, 1921. The case was argued by the defense when attorneys for the defense presented proof that the two negroes were riding on passes when they were injured.

More Than $10,500 Already Raised, Despite Inclement Weather During First Days of the Campaign.

While no formal committee reports were made to the Salvation Army campaign headquarters Wednesday, more than $10,500 was reported from the work of four committees during the day, raising the total amount now in hand to over $10,500.

The Masonic club, headed by Paul T. Coleman, moved into third place in the team standing, with a report for the day of $892.45.

Mrs. F. T. Rayburn's committee, at the Askey hotel booth, secured $50, and Mrs. Walker and Miss McLaurin, at the Madison hotel booth, secured $25; Mrs. N. C. Simms, of the Atlanta chapter, U. D. C. committee, received a donation amounting to $80 from the Gulfport Fertilizer company.

Arkwright Gives $100.

Other donations of considerable amount included $100 from Preston S. Arkwright, $50 from employees of the Federal Reserve bank, and $20 from Avery and company.

The firms where every employee subscribes to the fund will be awarded a 100 per cent honor bonus. Two firms were reported Wednesday as qualified for this emblem, these being the Munn Sign company and the Downman-Wilkins Printing company.

The second formal report of team captains to campaign headquarters will be made at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon in assembly room No. 2, of the chamber of commerce. A special call has been made to all team captains to be on hand at that time to give an accounting of the collections which have been made to date.

Beginning immediately, all district territorial assignments will be done away with and campaign workers will be allowed to secure subscriptions at any point that they are able.

While a large number of committees have been unable to see a full list of the people in their territory, they are still continuing their work and chairman state that they will not abandon their particular fields until they are able to see every available person.

Mail Subscriptions.

Owing to the inclement weather during Tuesday and Wednesday and to the unfavorable forecast for the rest of the week, it has been deemed advisable to ask all those who have not yet been approached and who desire to make donations to the Salvation Army fund to mail these in directly to Preston S. Arkwright, the chairman of the campaign, checks being made payable to William T. Perkinson, treasurer.

Also a request has been made to business firms in the city who have received subscription blanks to mail these in to Mr. Arkwright's office as soon as employees have been canvassed.

The total amounts received to date have been less than the totals anticipated, and renewed efforts are now being made to increase the size of the daily donations. A renewed appeal is being made to the people of the city to aid in every way possible the most vital welfare activities in the city of Atlanta to proceed without handicap during the coming year.

Bootlegging Queen
Quits After Making
Fortune of $50,000

Omaha, Neb., April 4.—There may be a moral in this story—somewhere.

Three years ago Louise Vinciquerra was living on charity.

Wednesday, Louise, who is but 23 years old and good looking, after earning the local sobriquet of "Queen of the Bootleggers," retired with a "pile" of more than $50,000.

Louise's retirement came as the result of her arrest Monday. It was the first time in three years that her home had been raided by the police. She was fined $100.

"I have a $10,000 home, beautifully furnished at a cost of $5,000," she said as she announced her retirement. "I have a $2,000 automobile, an electric piano, $20,000 in the bank, two sons and a youthful, good looking and loving husband.

"What more could any woman want?

"I'm quitting the game because I must give my boys a chance in life. I don't want them ever to have to be ashamed of their mother."

REV. RICHARD BELSHAM TO DELIVER LECTURES

Rev. Richard A. Belsham, Augusta, Ga., will arrive here today for a series of addresses on Bible prophecy, to be delivered at the Gospel Tabernacle on Capitol avenue. He will speak at 7:30 o'clock Thursday and Friday. The series will close Sunday with three addresses, at 11 a. m., 3 p. m., and 7:30 p. m.

Mr. Belsham is pastor of the Druid Park Avenue church in Augusta. He is an Englishman by birth, and was an ardent disciple of the famous English divine Charles H. Spurgeon.

DRUNK IN AUTO,
TWO MEN FINED;
THIRD IS SOUGHT

C. L. Heath, 20, and J. C. Jackson, 21, were fined $11 and L. F. Holcombe was placed on probation by Recorder George E. Johnson Wednesday afternoon upon charges of disorderly conduct. W. C. Jones, 23, who was taken into custody at the same time, forfeited collateral placed for his appearance in court.

Officers stated that Holcombe, Heath and Jackson were found sitting in an automobile parked on Peters street at a late hour Tuesday night. Stopping to investigate, the officers stated, they found them to be intoxicated, and found an overturned quart bottle containing a small quantity of liquor in the front seat.

The young men told them, officers stated, that they were waiting for Jones, the owner of the car who had gone into a house to visit a friend. The officers awaited Jones' return and finding him to be under the influence of whisky also, took them all into custody. Jones failing to appear, a charge of operating an automobile while intoxicated was not preferred against any of the defendants. They declared that Jones was driving.

When Holcombe stepped up to the desk he brought with him two of the "blackest" eyes ever to be seen in a recorder's court. He also had a number of scratches about the face, and it developed that Tuesday night as Holcombe's prostrate frame and blacked his couch in police station, a newly made prisoner having no blanket and saying the one that enveloped Holcombe's form, proceeded to take it for his own personal use.

Holcombe resisted, and the prisoner, whose name has not yet been divulged, immediately climbed Holcombe's prostrate frame and blacked his eyes. Officers stated that they thought the blanket-hunter had even gone so far as to kick Holcombe in the face before he could succeed in arising to defend himself.

SUNSHINE IS DUE IN ATLANTA TODAY
BEFORE NIGHTFALL

After 12 o'clock Thursday, beautiful weather with plenty of sunshine is in store for Atlanta, the weather man declared Wednesday, but stated that moderately lower temperature would prevail.

An area of colder weather in the northwest, moving eastward across the lakes, Mr. von Herrmann stated, would not have much effect on Georgia. Showers which came during the morning hours Wednesday were expected to continue Thursday.

ASHLEY AND WHITE
IN COUNCIL RACE IN FOURTH WARD

A hot race for councilman in the fourth ward in the primary next September was predicted Wednesday by political leaders at the city hall in view of announcements from two avowed candidates for the place.

Councilman Claude L. Ashley, present representative in council from the fourth ward, whose term expires this year, recently declared he had definitely decided to seek re-election. Councilman Ashley is chairman of the street committee and is serving on several important committees.

The other avowed candidate, who made formal announcement Wednesday is J. A. White, widely known Atlanta business man and member of the city planning commission, who declares he will be in the race to a finish.

Mr. White's formal announcement follows:

To the voters of the fourth ward: "I am a candidate for councilman (subject to the white democratic primary) to hold this year at a later date. I entered the race after my friends from every section of the ward assured me that they would support my campaign, and assured me that they would make every legal effort to elect me.

"I will say to all my friends and voters of the ward that there will be no compromise with me as has been suggested, and there will be only one thing that will keep me from remaining in the race, and that will be death.

"I am young, ambitious and have and am still working for everything that will improve conditions in the ward and city. I ask the support of the people of my ward and assure them of a progressive administration, and I do not think that any one person should continue in general council for years; I am in favor of tax equalization, whereby the home owner would be assessed in proportion as central property, and not on a higher basis. I will work to the end to see that every street in the ward is paved with concrete, or some other pavement that is satisfactory. I am at present and will continue to work to get the Georgia Railway and Power company to extend car service out Jackson street to Tenth street, to transport the people to those sections to and from the city. I will announce in more detail the things I will advocate later. I hope that I may see you all in person. My office is 30 Walton street; residence, 35 Mackintosh drive. When downtown drop in to see me.

Respectfully,
"J. A. WHITE."

Appeal Is Referred to the Finance Committee for Consideration.

A large committee from the Atlanta real estate board went before the Fulton county board of commissioners Wednesday afternoon to ask for aid in putting over the big Central park project that has been sponsored by the real estate board.

After hearing several addresses the commissioners referred the matter to the finance committee, promising the real estate board that action of some kind will be taken at once.

Before referring the matter to the finance committee a majority of the commissioners signified that they favored the big park project, and it is believed that financial and moral backing will be forthcoming. Eloquent addresses were made on the Central park proposition by R. R. Otis, Oscar Mills, R. E. Davidson, all of whom set forth the advantages that would accrue to the city by the creation of the magnificent play ground and recreation center.

The committee also visited Mayor Walter Sims with reference to the Central park and assurance was given by the mayor that papers will be drawn up preparatory to bringing the park proposal officially before the general council.

President George M. Brown, Jr., of the real estate board, headed the big committee.

Four Other Pupils Went to Positions as Bookkeepers on Monday, This Week, While Several Accepted Stenographic Positions.

Enroll now for the spring term of the Southern Shorthand & Business University. A large number have enrolled between now and April 10th.

While new pupils are daily coming in, those already in attendance and who are finishing their courses are continually going out to commercial positions, several having gone with important firms on Monday of the present week.

This fact, that of showing results, has made "beaten paths" to the doors of the Southern Business College by those in quest of Business Success.

On Monday, April 2, P. Z. Pharr, a pupil of the Southern, went with the W. S. Realty & Guaranty Company as bookkeeper. Miss Mildred McElroy went with the Jessup & Antrim Ice Cream Company as bookkeeper. A. R. Churchill accepted a position as bookkeeper for the J. L. Riley Insurance Company. Mrs. Minnie Dean secured a bookkeeper's position with the F. & M. Clothing Company.

Miss Sarah Briley accepted a position as stenographer with J. L. Riley Company, making two of the Southern's pupils who were employed this week by that firm. Miss Madge Hilburn also, as stenographer, with the Al Lichtman Corporation.

A letter just received from Miss Sara Fincher, who only recently accepted a good position with the Jas. W. Austin Law Firm, one of Atlanta's most prominent law firms, relates an interesting story about her preparation for a business career.

Miss Fincher says that the Southern Business College has been her benefactor since coming to Atlanta from Mountville, her former home. Read her letter below:

POLICE PROBING BLAZE BELIEVED
WORK OF THIEVES

Police Wednesday were investigating a fire at the grocery store of Fred Hannah, 308 Windsor street, Tuesday, which is reported to have been of incendiary origin. The theory has been advanced that burglars, after looting the place, started the fire in an effort to cover up their tracks.

Two other robberies were being probed by the police Wednesday. One was at the Williams & Flynt Lumber company, 240 Elliott street, where an adding machine was stolen from the office, and valuable papers removed from the desk; and the other at T. A. Barrett's store, at 282 Simpson street, where several articles of value were stolen.

LARCENY AFTER TRUST CHARGED TO DRYMAN

Jesse Johnson, dryman for M. C. Kaiser company, 17 East Hunter street, was bound over to the state court Wednesday by Judge George E. Johnson upon charges of forgery and larceny after trust. Bond was fixed at $5,000.

The Kaiser company charged that Johnson had on several occasions stolen parcel post packages from the outgoing mail matter. It was stated that Johnson each evening would deliver the packages to the postoffice, upon a sheet which the postoffice officials checked over and signed. Johnson, it was charged, would withhold packages and after the parcel post officials had changed the original number placed on the list by the Kaiser company and signed it, Johnson would add the missing packages. Gordon Kaiser, representing the Kaiser company, stated that the dryman had secured several hundred dollars worth of mail matter during the time he had been in their employ.

Mayor Walter A. Sims Wednesday morning attached his official signature to the ordinance adopted by city council at its session last Monday which repeals the anti-skating measure and permits use of the sidewalks by children for roller skating purposes.

After signing the ordinance, which becomes effective immediately, Mayor Sims in a communication to Police Chief James L. Beavers, notified him that it would be legal for children to skate on the sidewalks in the future, provided they adhered to certain regulations against creating a public nuisance or skating in front of houses where property owners objected.

NEW TRIAL ASKED FOR VICTOR INNES

Motion Is Made on the Grounds That Verdict of the Jury Is Without Evidence to Support It.

A motion for a new trial for Victor E. Innes, convicted in federal court Tuesday on a charge of using the mails to defraud Mrs. Eloise Nelms, was heard at 10 o'clock Saturday morning.

Attorneys for Innes, following announcement of the verdict of guilty, gave notice of intention to move for a new trial, and the motion was filed Wednesday morning.

The motion is founded on the allegations that the verdict is contrary to evidence and without evidence to support it, and that it is contrary to law and the principles of justice and equity.

Innes was convicted following a sensational seven-day trial during which the entire history of the baffling disappearance of the Nelms sisters was thoroughly rehearsed. Prosecution, conducted by Hugh M. Dorsey and Joel B. Mallet, sought to establish that Innes murdered the two girls, Mrs. Eloise Nelms and Miss Beatrice Nelms, in an attempt to conceal the crime for which he was convicted.

A verdict of guilty was returned by the jury in less than ten minutes, and Judge Samuel H. Sibley, presiding, sentenced Innes to pay a fine of $1,000 and serve five years in prison. Innes claimed that he was the victim of "concocted evidence," against which he had been given no opportunity to defend himself, having been kept in jail ever since 1914.

This was the third trial of Innes on charges arising from the mysterious disappearance of the Nelms sisters. He was acquitted of the charge of murder in this connection, brought in Texas shortly after the disappearance of the two Atlanta women, and was later convicted in the state courts of Georgia on a charge of larceny after trial.

He served several years in the convict camp for this offense, and was released immediately after completing this sentence.

Owsley, Marooned
By Storm, Refuses
To Use Airplane

Baton Rouge, La., April 4.—Alvin Owsley, national commander of the American Legion, marooned here today while en route to New Orleans to Jackson, Miss., to participate in a legion celebration and deliver an address at the dedication of Jackson's new city auditorium and armory, declared this afternoon that he positively would not make the remainder of the journey by airplane.

"I promised my wife that I would not ride in a plane, and I'll stick to the train," he said.

Mr. Owsley left New Orleans on an Illinois Central train. It encountered a washout near Brookhaven, Miss., returned south and detoured via the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad. North of here it was stopped by a washout near Gloster, Miss., and returned to Baton Rouge.

The legionnaires at Jackson, undaunted, arranged with an aviator to take Mr. Owsley in a biplane in the parade late today. He will not ride.

The earth wobbles a little about its axis.

46,000 ON STRIKE IN WELSH MINES

Walkout Called to Force
5,000 Non-Union Workers to Join Labor Organization.

Cardiff, Wales, April 4.—(By The Associated Press.)—Forty-six thousand miners in the Rhondda coal fields went on strike today. A pit in the district was working this morning. Picketing was being maintained in many places, but no cases of reported non-compliance with the attempt to work. The strike was called for the purpose of forcing some 5,000 non-union miners to join the miners' federation, the surface men and stokers having organized themselves into a union which the federation refused to recognize.

This was the third trial of Innes on charges arising from the mysterious disappearance of the Nelms sisters. He was acquitted of the charge of murder in this connection, brought in Texas shortly after the disappearance of the two Atlanta women, and was later convicted in the state courts of Georgia on a charge of larceny after trial.

DEMOCRAT LANDSLIDE IN CHICAGO ELECTION

Dever Is Given 103,748 Plurality, by Unofficial Returns.

Chicago, April 4.—(By The Associated Press.)—On top of a democratic landslide, William E. Dever, judge of the superior court, was carried into the office of mayor, succeeding William Hale Thompson, retiring after serving eight years for the republican party. The avalanche of votes that gave Judge Dever the biggest plurality in the city's history, with one exception, that received by Mayor Thompson in 1915, also placed in office, democratic candidates for city clerk and city treasurer.

Unofficial returns of yesterday's election, compiled by a news-gathering agency, gave Judge Dever a total of 103,748 and Arthur J. Vander, republican majority candidate, and former postmaster, 284,213. Judge Dever's plurality was announced as 103,748. Mayor Thompson's plurality in the republican landslide of 1915, was 147,477.

In the only congressional election in the state, to fill the vacancy in the second Illinois district created by the death of Congressman James R. Mann, the republicans were victorious. Morton D. Hull, former state senator, defeated Frank O'Hara, democrat, and former lieutenant governor by 56,330 to 42,495, according to unofficial figures.

Council Democratic.

Although the old city council was democratic before the primaries, February 17, in which 39 aldermen were elected and yesterday's election naming the remaining twenty, the party increased its strength. Thirteen of the aldermen elected yesterday were democrats giving the party 37 aldermen as compared with the republicans' 13.

Four of five aldermanic candidates, considered strong supporters of Mayor Thompson and his administration, were defeated.

John A. Cervenka, democrat, defeated John W. Healy, republican, for city treasurer, and A. F. Gorman, democrat, won over William H. Cruden, republican, for city clerk.

William A. Cullen, socialist majority candidate, according to unofficial returns, received 41,841 votes.

The aldermanic election gave Judge Dever a working majority of Chicago's first city council of 50 aldermen. Twelve normally strong republican wards elected their first democrat alderman in 20 years.

Long Experience.

Judge Dever's large vote, that gave him a plurality in 23 of the 50 wards, was ascribed to the voters' belief of his advantage over Mr. Leuder in municipal experience. Judge Dever had been in public life for 23 years. The total vote in the municipal election was 713,015, only 78.7 per cent of the total registered vote. The election was quiet and while kidnappings and acts of lawlessness were reported from some precincts yesterday's voting was carried to a conclusion without any violent outbreaks such as have occurred in the past.

Four series of bond issues totalling $2,000,000 were voted by residents of the South Park district.

While Mayor Thompson, who announced his retirement after the selection of Mr. Leuder as candidate, by the republican caucus, took no active part in the campaign, republicans yesterday charged that Mayor Thompson's forces had been thrown behind Judge Dever.

Judge Dever was born in Woburn, Mass., March 13, 1862. His father had a tannery in that city where Judge Dever learned the trade. In 1887, Judge Dever, and his wife came to Chicago and he worked in a tannery here. At night he studied law in the Kent College of Law, from which he graduated in 1890 with honors.

In 1900, Chicago's new mayor entered politics, but was defeated as a candidate for alderman. Two years later he was elected and served five terms in succession. At the end of his fifth term he was elected to the superior court bench, re-elected in 1916, and again in 1922. The last term does not expire until 1928.

R. Gray, editor of The Atlanta Journal, they have two lovely young daughters, Mary Inman, who is 17, and Jennie Gray, who is 13, both of whom have frequently visited their grandmother, Mrs. J. R. Gray, at her Peachtree road home.

Colonel Pearce is a native of McDuffie county. He graduated from the United States Military Academy, at West Point, in 1897, and assigned to the artillery branch of the service. He entered the world of command of the 319th and 320th artillery of the 82d division, rendering brilliant service for which he was awarded the distinguished service medal. Returning from Europe after the war he was put in command of Jackson barracks at New Orleans, and for the past two years has been commandant of the cadet corps of the University of Washington, at Seattle.

Major Peadleton's service as commandant of Tech caets approaching its conclusion by limitation, the war department communicated with President Britain, of Tech, stating that with the approval of board of trustees, it would assign Colonel Pearce to succeed Major Peadleton. The board gave its unanimous approval at yesterday's meeting.

This concludes the matter and Colonel Pearce will move to Atlanta this summer with his family, much to the delight of their friends here.

Four series of bond issues totalling $2,000,000 were voted by residents of the South Park district.

While Mayor Thompson, who announced his retirement after the selection of Mr. Leuder as candidate, by the republican caucus, took no active part in the campaign, republicans yesterday charged that Mayor Thompson's forces had been thrown behind Judge Dever.

Judge Dever was born in Woburn, Mass., March 13, 1862. His father had a tannery in that city where Judge Dever learned the trade. In 1887, Judge Dever, and his wife came to Chicago and he worked in a tannery here. At night he studied law in the Kent College of Law, from which he graduated in 1890 with honors.

In 1900, Chicago's new mayor entered politics, but was defeated as a candidate for alderman. Two years later he was elected and served five terms in succession. At the end of his fifth term he was elected to the superior court bench, re-elected in 1916, and again in 1922. The last term does not expire until 1928.

COL. E. D'A. PEARCE TO LEAD CAETS

R. Gray, editor of The Atlanta Journal, they have two lovely young daughters, Mary Inman, who is 17, and Jennie Gray, who is 13, both of whom have frequently visited their grandmother, Mrs. J. R. Gray, at her Peachtree road home.

Colonel Pearce is a native of McDuffie county. He graduated from the United States Military Academy, at West Point, in 1897, and assigned to the artillery branch of the service. He entered the world of command of the 319th and 320th artillery of the 82d division, rendering brilliant service for which he was awarded the distinguished service medal. Returning from Europe after the war he was put in command of Jackson barracks at New Orleans, and for the past two years has been commandant of the cadet corps of the University of Washington, at Seattle.

Major Peadleton's service as commandant of Tech caets approaching its conclusion by limitation, the war department communicated with President Britain, of Tech, stating that with the approval of board of trustees, it would assign Colonel Pearce to succeed Major Peadleton. The board gave its unanimous approval at yesterday's meeting.

This concludes the matter and Colonel Pearce will move to Atlanta this summer with his family, much to the delight of their friends here.

The published reports that a movement of some momentum had been started in favor of an open shop declaration were received here early in the week with pain and Mr. Gompers' statement tonight plainly served to aggravate this feeling.

Large Audiences to Greet Marionettes "Clarence"

From all indications the Marionettes will play before two of the largest audiences ever on the 13th and 14th when they will present Tarkington's world famous comedy, "Clarence." The advance sale has been the heaviest in the history of the club. The night of April 14th, which is annually known as "Tech" night, has been practically sold out. On this night all the frats at the school and their fair guests will assemble to witness the players and on this night also the sponsor for next year's club will be presented. Her name will be kept a secret until this night. She will be elected by the club this week. The night of the 13th has been especially reserved for the club's many friends and for the public in general. This performance is being sponsored by the Tech Woman's Club, the members of which will attend the performance as patrons. Tickets are now selling for both nights at the Tech Y. M. C. A. and at the Woman's Club. Popular prices of $1.25 to 55 cents will prevail at both showings.

A special musical setting for "Clarence" is being arranged for the Marionettes by Harry Pomar, well known Atlanta composer. Mr. Pomar will conduct the orchestra himself and will have charge of the incidental music which is one of the most charming features of the production. Mr. Pomar has written a beautiful melody for the Marionettes' "Love Moon" which will be used throughout the play and the strains of which will be heard by the audience for hours afterwards. Mrs. Jackson has put her proteges through a most strenuous rehearsing of the entire production. This past week, when the rehearsals were transferred from Tech to the stage of the Woman's Club. The cast is well balanced and will interpret Booth Tarkington's well known and lovable characters with an entirely satisfactory understanding. Harry Ellerbe, who heads the cast as the droll and subtle "Clarence," will make his final appearance with the Marionettes, after four years of service. He will be supported by Roderick Brantley, who needs no introduction to Marionette audiences, as "Mrs. Wheeler," Landon Clark as "Violet Pinney" (one of the most beautiful "women" in the club); Lawrence Petri as "Cora Wheeler"; John Gill as "Delia"; Jimmie Whitfield as "Bobby Wheeler"; Allen Bartlett as "Mr. Wheeler"; Walt Striplin as "Dinwiddle"; Hugh Saussey as "Hubert Stem" and Delmar Robertson as "Mrs. Martyn."

After the Atlanta performances "Clarence" will be taken on a road trip by the Marionettes. The company will play in Columbia, S. C., for a two performance engagement on April 21st.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

HOME-MADE VARNISH.
A cheap varnish for oilcloth can be made at home by dissolving two ounces of glue in a quart of water.

SAVES TIME.
Pack the school lunches in the same place every day, where oiler, rasher, paper napkins and the other necessities are convenient.

PREVENT SEPARATING.
Put the pudding made with milk into a cool oven and let the oven heat with it. If put into a hot oven the intense heat is apt to curdle it.

Memorial Service For Mrs. W. L. Peel At State Conference

A memorial service for Mrs. William Lawson Peel will be held Tuesday morning at the state conference of the Daughters of the American Revolution at Habersham hall.

Mrs. Peel's life was replete with manifestations of loyal service to mankind. She worked faithfully for the uplift and advancement of the community in which she lived and from the earliest years of her womanhood she has left the imprint of her noble character upon the minds and hearts of those associates who under her able leadership, assisted in bringing to fruition the many and original plans which emanated from her fertile brain. Her daring individuality and integrity together with a warm hearted and loyal attitude toward her friends caused her to be admired and loved.

During the Cotton States exposition of 1895 Mrs. Peel secured from certain owners and holders in the thirteen original states a collection of relics such as has never been seen before or since in the south. For these she made herself and her fortune responsible.

The work of Mrs. Peel during the late world war is deserving of special mention. She was a member of one of the branches of war relief work and also accomplished a great deal for the relief of the fatherless children of France. She was one of the organizers of the Atlanta chapter, D. A. R., and was a member of the committee which secured from the state of Massachusetts, through Governor Grech, the gift of the original "Crucible House" that served as a home for that chapter until the handsome building on Piedmont avenue was acquired. Later she became identified with the Joseph Habersham chapter, D. A. R., as one of its founders; was its first regent and supplied from her own pocket the funds of the chapter, much of which was raised by her own personal effort in the erection of Habersham hall, our permanent home.

She was a forceful and convincing speaker as well as a talented writer. Her work in compiling and publishing the history of the "Historical Collections of the Joseph Habersham Chapter, D. A. R." which have been placed upon the shelves of our best libraries and which have proven to be of incalculable value to those engaged in historical research, will, in itself, serve to perpetuate the name of Mrs. William Lawson Peel. It was this service to the world at large which caused the Georgia daughters to confer upon her the degree of honorary state regent for life. She was elected vice president general and served for two years in that capacity.

She was a lover of order, cleanliness and beauty and it was through her effort that the City Beautiful movement was born.

Resolved, That while we bow with unshaken resignation to the will of Him who doeth all things well, we can but give expression to our sorrow at the loss of our loved and valued friend, Mrs. W. L. Peel. It is resolved, That in the passing of Mrs. Lucy Cook Peel the city of Atlanta has lost one of its most universal benefactors; this chapter, one of its first and dearest members, her husband a faithful, true and devoted wife and her children a noble mother and wise and affectionate counsel.

Resolved, That as a mark of our profound respect and warm appreciation of the life and work of our friend and co-worker, we direct that this preamble and resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our chapter; a copy sent to each of the daily papers for publication and that a copy of these proceedings be sent to Colonel William L. Peel and family.

Resolutions Adopted.
Whereas, It has pleased our gracious Father in heaven to remove from our midst our honorary state regent for life, Mrs. William Lawson Peel, whose service to the various patriotic, civic and benevolent causes has won for her memory all honor and reverence, and

Before Baby Comes

THERE are thousands of expectant mothers who undergo much useless suffering for months before, as well as at the moment when delivery occurs. These months of suffering, with nerves and vital organs weakened, leave their effect upon the child. An eminent physician found the way to stop much of this unnecessary suffering—the same easy way which thousands of mothers have used for three generations.

Mrs. Walter S. Hadley, Bridgeport, Ind., says: "Before my little boy came I was so paralyzed in my hips and limbs I could hardly walk, and some days after a little extra exertion I couldn't walk a step. I felt it coming on this time; in fact, I could hardly get up when I sat down, but now, after using one bottle of Mother's Friend, I am so much better. I feel that I almost owe my life to Mother's Friend."

"Mother's Friend" is applied externally to the abdomen, back and hips. It penetrates remarkably, permitting the easier relaxation and distension of muscles, nerves, tissues and ligaments, and their constant easy readjustment during expectancy and at child-birth. Have no morbid fear or dread, Mother's Friend is Mother's Friend now—the sooner the better.

Mrs. C. J. Hartman, Scranton, Pa., says: "With my first two children I had a doctor and a nurse, and then they had to use instruments, but with my last two children I used Mother's Friend and had a nurse; we had this time a doctor, because I wasn't very sick—only about ten or fifteen minutes."

"Mother's Friend" contains no narcotics or harmful drugs. It is safe. For three generations "Mother's Friend" has saved expectant mothers much useless suffering. Mother's Friend must avoid mere greases and useless substitutes. Begin using "Mother's Friend" today. It is sold at drug stores everywhere.

THE VITAL FLAME

BY MAY CHRISTIE

A Stirring Serial of Primitive Passions

Leading characters in this stirring romance. Marcella Field, beautiful daughter of an impoverished aristocrat, falls in love with Miles Holden, a brilliant young sculptor, who loves her as well, but is unscrupulous, long a suitor of Marcella, he swears the promise from her, Treman does not disdain to hold over her the memory of a youthful indiscretion, revelation of which would hurt her terribly. He banks on his power to help her father financially. Louie Day, a pretty, though scheming milliner, whose Miles, through the kindness of his heart has helped. Louie, member of a band of crooks who wins Marcella's sympathy. It is evident that Treman has recognized her as a person he had known in the past. Lady Warrington, hostess at a house party where Marcella, Miles, Warwick and Louie are guests. Louie lets it be understood that she and Holden are engaged. Holden, thinking he had been deceived by Marcella, is deeply hurt. And she meet and begin explanation.

CHAPTER XXII

Treman Plans to Play a Trump. "Don't be angry, Miles," Marcella begged. "I didn't mean to—"

"Didn't mean to what? Don't play with me a second time, Marcella!" She did not answer, for a great lump was in her throat.

"You had something from me, on that ship? I never gave you one but about another—suitor? Why was that? Do you call it fair play?"

She put her two hands to her face, as though in shame or pain. "I—I fell in love—with you," she whispered, brokenly.

"But I had a right to know about your previous attachment? You were practically engaged, and hid it from me. Was that honest? Can real love stand deceit? I can't, Marcella!"

She managed to blurt out: "Real love is frightened lest—the other person—the beloved one—may draw back."

"If he finds out the truth? Is that it?" He caught her roughly by the arm. "You pretended to love this other man. You even, after meeting me, allowed yourself to become engaged to him, so that you were publicly labelled as his fiancée. What hold had he on you, Marcella?"

She stared at him through frightened, tear-wet eyes. "Hold?"

"Yes, certainly. If you don't love him—and you can't love two persons, can you?—there was a definite reason behind your action. Was it—money?"

She was dumb. For the very life of her, she could not force her dry tongue to utter a single syllable. "Treman has money? Was it because of that? You needed it?"

Her thoughts winged to the check that Warwick had given her. "If Miles but knew, never, never would he forgive!"

She could never make him understand the misery she had endured when no word came from Paris. She could never make him believe that financial straits were so dire that she had allowed herself to be over-persuaded into accepting—yes, she had definitely refused to look upon it as a gift, but merely a temporary loan—a loan!

Treman's original threat of exposing that girlish indiscretion of so long ago—how it had frightened her! Then, cleverly, he had soothed those fears away. Warwick had become the "tactful friend," ready and willing for any service he could render her.

And now—by what process, she could not decipher—Miles had learnt she was indebted deeply to the other man, that indeed there was a "something" hanging over her—

She wet her dry lips with the tip of her tongue. "If you loved me, wouldn't you trust me?" she stammered. "Didn't you—here she tried to force a laugh, but lamentably failed—"didn't you tell me only a few minutes ago that you'd believe black was white, if I said so?"

No speech, perhaps, could have been more unfortunate or ill-judged. For into the young man's mind there naturally sprang the thought that she was purposely deceiving him.

Through the copious that was so gay with violets and with spring-time swept a sudden, chilly little wind. It made Marcella shiver. "It's getting on towards breakfast-time. Perhaps we ought to go?" she said uncertainly, hoping that he would reassure her, and remove the odd little fear that had crept into her heart. . . . a fear that, generous as he was, there were things that—once discovered—he couldn't possibly "get over". . . that hurt sensitiveness and destroyed trust might prove the death of love.

They walked side by side along the rather muddy roads Marcella with the reins over her arm, and racking her brains for an inspiration that would put the situation right. "You seem suddenly so different!" she contrived to say, at last. "What's happened?"

Miles gave a strained smile. "Why, nothing. I was only thinking how short a time, in reality, we'd known each other."

The chill foreboding grew. "You mean that everything has been too sudden? Is that it?" Her heart seemed to be beating in her throat.

Confessions of a Debutante

BY RUTH AGNES ABELING

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY.

I was away from my fiancé, Jonathan Grey, rich and elderly, to the arms of a man who dances well. His wife, Mrs. Larry, shows me the folly of my course and becomes my friend. I return home. My engagement to Grey is announced though my affection is for Mr. Stranger, a chance acquaintance whose name I never learned but who made love to me. Jonathan horrifies our wedding because he fears a breach of promise suit from a girl whom he paid to substitute for me at my engagement party in event I willfully refused to attend. As the ceremony is finished he has a stroke of paralysis but recovers in a few days. Jonathan quarrels with me and has a second stroke. His anger is increased by newspaper story about Elsie, my sister, who ran away with an unknown man. Jonathan forbids me to recognize her.

It was nearly noon today when mother telephoned frantically. Father was suddenly worse.

I turned from the telephone to Mercer. "Can I leave everything in your hands? The ordering of the meals? Excuse to Jonathan? Everything? My father is very ill—very ill?"

"Yes, Madame," and though Mercer did not move from the place in which he stood, I had the feeling that he had taken my hands and looked into my eyes as he spoke.

I hurried away, driving my own motor. At home I found mother in the living room crying. "Oh—it's so terrible!" She said when she saw me.

I brushed past her and went on up stairs to Dad's room. As I took his hand he smiled faintly but no sound came from between his slightly parted lips.

He had a strange look, a different look and I sensed the fact that he was neering, the end of the trail. I liked the ease and the fearlessness in his eyes. There was something majestic about it. As if, instead of some unknown and frightening condition coming upon him, overtaking him, he was going calmly, self-possessionally to it meeting it half way and courageously. I watched silently at his bedside. Occasionally mother peered into the room. I was glad she didn't stay. Her nervous crying would have disturbed him. I watched while the afternoon wore on and finally, as the daylight faded he smiled up at me and then his eyes closed on a home and a world which had understood him, not too well.

I stood there for a minute, looking at his figure lying there in the dusk. It had all seemed so quiet, a kindly so like him. Then I went down stairs. Mother looked up as I entered the room.

"He's gone," I said, scarcely above a whisper. Her grief was a terrible thing. And I stood by and watched it grimly. Finally she calmed and began to talk of arrangements. Suddenly she said:

"Elsie came today."

"Elsie!" There was a lit of genuine happiness in my voice. "I'm so glad!"

"She had heard that her father was ill," mother went on. "She came to see him. Went up into his room before I knew she was in the house. I heard the anger gathering in her voice. "And I told her to leave," she finished. "To leave?" I echoed. "Not there in his room?"

"In the hall—I told her she had disgraced us and to go and never darken my door again!"

"Elsie!" Came from my lips. I sat silently in the shadows for a space and then:

"Did you get her address? Where she lives?"

"Certainly not! I want to know nothing of her!"

I was stunned. The day had been too much. I huddled there in the shadows, my aching head resting on my hand. Through the darkness occasionally, came the sound of mother's sobbing.

MRS. WALLACE HANGER IS INDORSED BY GEORGIA D. A. R.

Washington Woman Backed For President General

BY BESSIE SHAW STAFFORD.
The endorsement of Mrs. G. Wallace Hanger for president general of the American Revolution by the state conference, D. A. R., at the session held Wednesday morning at Habersham hall, was the most important incident of the day.

The election will take place at the 32nd continental congress in Washington, D. C., the week beginning April 16. The members of the Georgia D. A. R. societies showed by this act the full confidence placed in Mrs. Hanger's ability, and suitability to cope with and handle the tremendous problems involved in holding such a high office. She stands for an open, friendly campaign, such as benefits not only those officers within the gift, but also the pre-eminence of the society. She entered the campaign when Mrs. William N. Reynolds, of North Carolina, had to withdraw on account of illness, and her varied service to society through several administrations as president, general, chapter regent, state vice regent, vice president general, as both chairman and member of many national committees, and her own personal efforts in organizing secretary general have won her high commendation and strong support. During the D. A. R. war relief service, she established a record for thoroughness and exactness by her work of tabulating nearly 20,000 of the war questionnaires of the daughters, on which she gave an outstanding report to the congress of 1918.

She claims the support of former president general, Mrs. George Tatchers Guernsey, as well as that of the present president general, Mrs. George Maynard Minor, and her of-ficially, Mrs. Hanger has been shown that she is an independent, and while willing to consult and confer with other leaders, has a mind of her own.

The platform on which Mrs. Hanger is confident of being carried into the highest chair in the society contains eight planks, as follows:

- (1) The support of the principles set forth in the constitution and by-laws of the national society;
- (2) The encouragement of the society's human outlook toward patriotic, educational and historical work;
- (3) A continuance of the sound, practical, business basis on which the society now stands;
- (4) The gradual reduction of the debt of the new administration building without soliciting special donations for this purpose. She believes that gradual payments can be made by careful, businesslike management of the finances of the society;
- (5) A continued issuance and distribution of the manual for immigrants;
- (6) The maintenance of the spirit of good feeling and co-operation now existing throughout the society, thereby strengthening the possibilities for the development and support of the society's work among the women and children detained at Ellis Island who are awaiting the decision of the immigration authorities;
- (7) The endeavor to promote further interest in and value of the D. A. R.

Mrs. Hanger's Ticket.

On Mrs. Hanger's ticket are: For chapter general, Mrs. Thomas A. Edison, of New Jersey; for recording secretary general, Mrs. Henry B. Joy of Michigan; for corresponding secretary general, Mrs. Eliza Perkins, of Maryland; for treasurer general, Mrs. H. P. Johnston, of Iowa; for historian general, Mrs. Florence S. Marcy Croft, of Connecticut; for librarian general, Mrs. Edward Lansing Hays, of Ohio; for curator general, Mrs. Will C. Barnes, of Arizona; and for reporter general to the Smithsonian Institution, Mrs. J. L. McFarland of Texas, each of whom is particularly fitted by reason of her ability, character, and experience for her respective post.

If Mrs. Hanger is elected, one of the things she will stress during her administration is the importance of people of all classes becoming familiar with the constitution of the D. A. R. and living up to it. She has made a thorough study of conditions past and present and is entirely familiar with all important questions as they affect the welfare of the country. She is particularly alive to the various insidious influences at work to undermine the patriotism of the American youth and feels that it is impossible to attach too much importance to the patriotic education of the child. One of the greatest needs of the times, according to Mrs. Hanger, is the need for a new force to have the right sort of laws and leave no stone unturned towards seeing that they are obeyed.

Before her marriage in 1902, she was Lucy Lutz, daughter of a prominent Washington family. She received her early education in that city, later continuing her studies abroad. She is the wife of G. Wallace Hanger, vice chairman of the United States railroad labor board, and is the mother of three charming children, Mrs. Hanger is a woman of high social position, as high as those of other well-known leaders, which she carries forth in her public life. It is they that have come to know the real comradeship existing there who have gained the truest insight into the heights of her character.

RECENT VISITOR.

Mrs. Hanger was the guest of Mrs. Howard H. McCall, vice president general, at the Georgian Terrace, who also entertained at the same time Mrs. Hanger's husband, Mr. G. Wallace Hanger, and Mrs. John Laidlaw Buell, vice president general of Connecticut.

Mrs. Akerman Presides.

The conference was called to order at 10:30 o'clock by Mrs. Akerman, state regent, and the invocation was made by Dr. L. O. Bricker. Mrs. Laura Etheridge presided over the opening exercises, singing "America." Mrs. A. L. Wilkins, of Eastman, recording secretary, called the roll.

Reports were read by the following chapters: Mrs. W. S. Coleman, ex-officials; Mrs. Henry Bernard Scott, program; Mrs. John M. Graham, rules. A telegram was read from Mrs. Frank Fleming, state president of the auxiliary of the American Legion, extending greetings to the conference. Mrs. Charles B. Jones, of Greenville, Texas, was a distinguished guest and brought greetings from the Texas D. A. R. Society. Mrs. Joseph Morgan brought greetings from the Atlanta Pioneer society, of which she is president, in which she paid tribute to the late Mrs. W. L. Peel. Telegrams were read from Mrs. George Maynard Minor, president general; Mrs. L. D. De Voe, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mrs. Sarah E. Guernsey, honorary president; Miss Mary Holmes spoke on "Americanization in the Near East," which was very interesting. Mrs. Akerman, state regent, read her report on the work of the past year.

Memorial Service.

An impressive feature of the morning session was the memorial service held by Mrs. Charles Stone, state chairman of monuments, as a tribute to the deceased daughters since the last conference. Representatives from chapters which they were members of placed flowers on the grave of the late Mrs. William L. Peel, who was an ex-vice president general of Georgia, of the National Society D. A. R., honorary state regent and founder of the Joseph Habersham chapter. A basket filled with Easter lilies was placed on the altar in memory of Mrs. Peel.

The following chapters paid tribute to deceased daughters: Joseph Habersham chapter; Mrs. Hammond Washington, of Macon; Samuel Reed of Easton; Stephen Heard, Elberton; Sergeant Newton chapter; Stone Castle chapter; of Dawson; James Monroe, of Forsyth; Atlanta chapter; Atlanta; Piedmont Continental; Atlanta; Pulaski chapter; Griffin; Oglethorpe chapter; Columbus; George Walton, Hancock; Sparta; Augusta chapter; Albany chapter; and Pelham chapter.

The Borough Treasurer

BY J. S. FLETCHER

Next Week, "Jil-Bett"
By Laura Jean Libbey

Breton glanced sharply at the four men who stood in the room. Carfax, he, of course, knew: the others were strangers. Two of them Breton instantly set down as detectives. But at the fourth man, who stood on the hearthrug, he looked long and hard.

And his thoughts immediately turned to the old woman who lived on the moor and to what she had said about the tall man who had met Harbrough.

"So here you are, Breton—and this is Miss Harbrough?" said Carfax. "This gentleman is Mr. John Wraythwaite of Wraye."

"My dear young lady!" the big man said, "I'm an old friend of your father's. You don't know me, of course."

"No!" replied Avie. "But I think it was you who sent that money to Mr. Breton."

"Ah! you're anticipating, young lady!" exclaimed Carfax. "We've a lot of talking to do. One moment," he continued, and turned away to the two supposed detectives who, after a few words with him, left the room. "Now then! Wraye is one of the most historic estates between here and the Tweed—everybody knows Wraye. And everybody knows, too, that there has been quite a romance about Wraye for some time—since the last Wraythwaite died, in fact."

"That Wraythwaite was a confirmed old bachelor. He lived to a great age—he outlived all his brothers and sisters. He left quite a tribe of nephews and nieces, who were distributed all over the world."

"One of the nephews made a strong claim to the estate, as being the eldest known heir. And he was, until recently, in good trim for establishing his claim, when my client here arrived on the scene. For this Mr. Wraye in this room is the eldest nephew—he is the rightful heir—and I am thankful to say that—only within this last day or two—his claim has been definitely recognized and established, and all without litigation."

"Yes—yes!" said Mr. Wraythwaite, lastly. "But never mind me and my affairs—get on to poor Harbrough."

"Your affair and Harbrough's are inextricably mixed, my dear sir," retorted Carfax, good humoredly. "This is how things are—or were. The oldest brother of the late squire of Wraye married John Harbrough's aunt—secretly. They had not been married long before the husband went off to Australia, leaving his wife behind until he had established himself—there had been differences between him and his family, and he was straitened in means."

"In his absence our friend here was born—and at the same time, say, his mother died. The child was brought up by Harbrough's mother—Mr. Wraythwaite and Harbrough are foster-brothers. It remained in the care of Harbrough's mother—who kept the secret of the marriage—until it was seven years old. Then, opportunity occurring, it was taken to its father in Australia."

"The father, Matthew Wraythwaite, made a big fortune in Australia, sheep farming. He never married again, and the fortune, of course, came at his death to his only son—our friend. Now, he had been told of the secret marriage of his father, but, being possessed of an ample fortune himself, he concerned himself little about the rest of the old family."

"However, a year or so ago, happening to read in the newspapers about the death of the old squire, his uncle, and the difficulty of definitely deciding the real heirship, he came over to England."

"But he had no papers relating to his father's marriage, and he did not know where it had taken place. He sought out the only man he could remember—his foster-brother Harbrough. And by Harbrough's advice, they met secretly."

"Harbrough did not know where that marriage had taken place—he had to search registers. Now and then, borough was with my client from nine o'clock—came to see Harbrough; when he did so, he and Harbrough met in quiet places. And on the night on which that man Kitley was murdered," concluded the solicitor, "Harbrough was with my client from nine o'clock until half-past four in the morning, when he parted with him near Hendon railway station. Mr. Wraythwaite will swear that."

Carfax, turning to Avie, "your father will be released like—like one o'clock! In the meantime Breton—how are things going? Has any fresh light been thrown on the Kitley murder? Very well, my dear sir—then you will allow me to throw some light on it!"

So saying, Carfax quitted the room—and within another minute returned, solemnly escorting the two detectives. Before the solicitor and his companions could seat themselves, Mr. Wraythwaite spoke.

"Carfax," he said, "there's no need for Miss Harbrough and me to listen to all that you've got to tell Mr. Breton. She and I will leave and join you later on."

He led the way to the door, beckoning Avie to accompany him.

"Run away, my dear young lady, and be quite happy—Mr. Wraythwaite will tell you everything you want to know. And now, my dear sir," said Carfax, as he shut the door on them, "there are things that you want to know, and that you are going to know—from me and from these two gentlemen. Mr. Stobb—Mr. Leykin. Both ex-Scotland Yard men, and now private inquiry agents."

"Let us proceed in order. I will open the case. When Wraye, who is going to do great things for Harbrough and his daughter—when Wraythwaite, I say, heard of Harbrough's arrest his first instinct was to tell everything. I advised him, as it was absolutely certain that no harm could come to Harbrough in the end, to let matters rest for the time being, until he had put the finishing touches to his own affair. He, however, insisted on sending you that reward money—which was done; nothing else would satisfy him."

"But now arose a deeply interesting phase of the whole affair. Wraythwaite was much struck by the newspaper accounts of your examination of Miss Pett and decided in Harbrough's interest to make a few inquiries into Miss Pett's antecedents. We employed Stobb and Leykin, men of great experience."

"Of course, Miss Pett in her testimony had given us something to go on. She had told you she had been housekeeper to a Major Stilman, at Kandahar Cottage, Woking. She had occupied posts at two London hotels. So Stobb went to Woking, and Leykin devoted himself to the London part of the business."

"And I think, Stobb," concluded the solicitor, turning to one of the detectives, "I think you'd better tell Mr. Breton what you found out at Woking, and then Leykin can tell us what he brought to light elsewhere."

"It was a very easy job, sir," said the detective. "All the time she was with Major Stilman—some considerable period—he was known to suffer terribly from neuralgia. He got drugs to alleviate the pain from every chemist in the place. And one day, Major Stilman was found dead in bed, with some of these drugs by his bedside. An inquest was held, and a verdict of death from misadventure—over-dose, you know—was returned. Against Miss Pett there appears to have been no suspicion in Woking."

"I went into things further," answered Stobb. "Stilman left by his will two thousand pounds and the furniture of his house, to Miss Pett. 'I see,' said Breton. 'It is quite possible that Miss Pett, knowing that Stilman took these strong doses, and having a pecuniary motive, gave him a still stronger one.'"

"Your turn, Leykin," said Carfax. "Well," he said, "of course, sir, what Miss Pett told you was quite right. But she neglected to tell that she had spent ten years in India. And while she was in India she was charged with strangling a fellow-servant—a Eurasian girl who had excited her jealousy. Miss Pett was evidently in love with her master's orderly. He wasn't in love with her. She became madly jealous of this Eurasian girl, who was under-murder. Some gold ornaments which the girl wore had disappeared. Miss Pett was born—and at the same time, say, his mother died. The child was brought up by Harbrough's mother—Mr. Wraythwaite and Harbrough are foster-brothers. It remained in the care of Harbrough's mother—who kept the secret of the marriage—until it was seven years old. Then, opportunity occurring, it was taken to its father in Australia."

"The father, Matthew Wraythwaite, made a big fortune in Australia, sheep farming. He never married again, and the fortune, of course, came at his death to his only son—our friend. And on the night on which that man Kitley was murdered," concluded the solicitor, "Harbrough was with my client from nine o'clock until half-past four in the morning, when he parted with him near Hendon railway station. Mr. Wraythwaite will swear that."

Carfax, turning to Avie, "your father will be released like—like one o'clock! In the meantime Breton—how are things going? Has any fresh light been thrown on the Kitley murder? Very well, my dear sir—then you will allow me to throw some light on it!"

So saying, Carfax quitted the room—and within another minute returned, solemnly escorting the two detectives. Before the solicitor and his companions could seat themselves, Mr. Wraythwaite spoke.

"Carfax," he said, "there's no need for Miss Harbrough and me to listen to all that you've got to tell Mr. Breton. She and I will leave and join you later on."

THE GUMPS—IN THE RING AGAIN

tried—and she was discharged, for she set up an alibi—of a sort that wouldn't have satisfied me. One of the witnesses said that she had been much interested in the methods of the Thugs, and how they strangled their victims. That's all, sir."

Without Thought of Consequence. Everything was very quiet in the house where Mallieu lay wide awake and watchful. Mallieu's nerves were set on edge, and it was with difficulty that he forced himself to lie still and listen.

Moreover, he was feeling the want of the drug which had soothed him into such sound slumber every night since he had been taken in charge by Miss Pett.

What were those two devils after, he wondered as he lay there in the darkness? No good—that was certain. He was in their power and had long since recognized them as an unscrupulous woman and a shifty man. They had nothing to do but hand him over to the police if they liked.

And yet a deeper reflection, he did not think that possible—for it was evident that aunt and nephew were after all they could get, and they would get nothing from the police authorities, while they might get a good deal from him.

But—what did they expect to get from him? He had been a little perplexed by their attitude when he asked them if they expected him to carry a lot of money on him—a fugitive.

Was it possible—the thought came to him like a thunderclap in the darkness—that they knew, or had some idea, of what he really had on him? That Miss Pett had dragged him every night he now felt sure—well, then, in that case how did he know that she hadn't entered his room and searched his belongings, and especially the precious waistcoat?

He put out a hand now and fingered the pile of garments which lay, neatly folded, within a few inches of his head. It was all right, now at any rate, and his hand drew back—to the revolver, separated from his cheek by no more than the thickness of the pillow.

The touch of that revolver made him begin speculating afresh. Supposing the charges had been drawn?—supposing he was defenceless, if a pinch came? He began to sweat with fear at the mere thought.

And just then came a sound. It was a very small sound—so small that it might have been no more than the scratch of the cat's paw on the tiniest mouse. But in that intense silence it was easily heard—and with it came the faint glimmering of a light.

The light widened—there was a little further sound—and Mallieu, peeping at things through his eyelashes became aware that the door was open, that a tall, spare figure was outlined between the bed and the light without.

And well behind the thin form of Miss Pett, he saw Christopher Pett's sharp face and the glint of his beady eyes. Mallieu let her advance half-way across the room on her stealthy path to the waistcoat. But silently as she came on with that cat-like tread, Mallieu had just as silently drawn the revolver from beneath his pillow and turned its small muzzle on her.

It had a highly polished barrel that revolver, and Miss Pett suddenly caught a tiny scintillation of light on it. She screamed.

And as she screamed Mallieu fired, and the scream died down to a queer choking sound—and he fired again—and where Christopher Pett's face had shown itself a second before there was nothing—save another choking sound and a fall in the entry where Christopher had stood and watched.

He slowly lifted himself out of bed, lit his candle and went forward to where the woman lay. She had collapsed between the foot of the bed and the wall; her shoulders were propped against the wall and the grotesque turban hung loosely down on one shoulder.

And Mallieu knew in that quick glance that she was dead. He crept onward to the door and looked at the other still figure, lying just as supinely in the passage that led to the living-room and began to dress with feverish haste. He must get out of that, and at once. The moors—the hills—anywhere. . . .

A sudden heavy knocking at the door at the back of the cottage set Mallieu shaking. He started for the front—to hear knocking there, too. Then came voices demanding admittance, and loudly crying the dead woman's name.

He crept to a front window at that, and carefully drew a corner of the blind and looked out, and saw many men in the garden. One of them had a lantern, and as its glare glanced about Mallieu set eyes on Cotherstone.

Cotherstone walked out of the dock and the court and the Town Hall amidst a dead silence—which was felt and noticed by everybody but himself.

Then suddenly, from somewhere in the crowd, a sneering voice flung a contemptuous taunt across the staring faces.

"Well done, Cotherstone!—saved your own neck, anyway!"

There was a ripple of jering laughter at that, and as Cotherstone turned angrily in the direction from whence the voice came, another, equally contemptuous, lifted itself from another corner of the crowd.

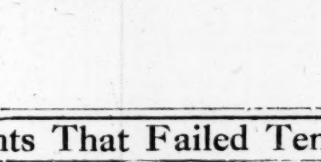

"King's evidence! Yah!—who'd believe Cotherstone? Lie!" It flashed and walked away. But the excitement that seized upon him in face of that public taunting died away in the silence of his own house. He showed no signs of anything unusual at supper, and when later he left, saying that he must go down to the office and fetch the accumulated correspondence, his manner was so ordinary that Bent, who was there, saw no reason why he should accompany him.

UNUSUAL FEATURE
MIDNIGHT HOUR
Miss Elizabeth Reed Presented Artists on WGM's Midnight Program Last Night.

The thousands of radio enthusiasts of the nation who remained up for Station WGM's weekly midnight offering on Wednesday night, were not disappointed in the magnificent program which Miss Elizabeth Reed, charming and talented young Atlanta mezzo-soprano, arranged for their listening pleasure.

Assisting Miss Reed were Miss Agnes Ragdale, winsome and gifted contralto; Earl A. Helton, noted pianist and telephone soloist; Charles Reed, Atlanta's popular saxophonist; the famous Wells quartet, and other radio celebrities, well known to listeners of the station.

Miss Reed's contributions included "Sweetheart," the beautiful song which she sang recently from this station that brought forth letters of commendation to this office. Other semi-classical and popular selections were given in her own inimitable manner which has endeared her to thousands of song lovers throughout America.

Miss Ragdale's delightful contralto voice was heard in a number of popular song hits, in each of which she displayed rare vocal gifts and unusual training.

Earl Helton and Charles Reed are too well known to Atlanta and to the radio fans of the nation to require mention. It is enough to say that these two popular entertainers were at their best last night and contributed much to the success of the brilliant broadcast.

The Wells quartet thrilled fans with old and popular song numbers, their voices blending beautifully. This quartet is one of the best ever heard by fans of this station who will be interested to know that a return engagement is scheduled for an early date.

The midnight program as a whole was one of the most enjoyable in many months, offering the variety of music and the quality which fans have grown to expect from The Constitution station.

Station WGM observed quiet hours throughout the day, "singing on" the air only at midday. The idea of quiet hours in Atlanta, it will be remembered, was initiated by this station some weeks ago to enable local listeners to receive the out-of-town stations.

The midnight programs each Wednesday are rapidly growing in popularity and each week's unit is heavily littered with letters and requests concerning the reception and appreciation of Station WGM's weekly mid-night offering.

CLEMENCY IS ASKED FOR SAM DUCKWORTH
A petition seeking pardon on behalf of Sam Duckworth, American convict, now serving a life sentence on the Sumter county chain gang for murder was presented Wednesday to the state prison commission.

Duckworth, according to the petition, was convicted of the murder of his wife, Mrs. Pearl Duckworth, whose body was found in a well near their home on the farm of Green A. Perry, in Pleasant Grove neighborhood, during the winter of 1912. The following day Duckworth was arrested at the home of a relative near the Dooley-Sumter county line. While in a drunken condition, he is said to have confessed the crime.

On the stand at his trial however Duckworth denied this confession and many circumstances brought out during the trial tended to show that Sidney Ware, a negro, was the actual murderer, according to the petition.

CLEMENCY IS ASKED FOR SAM DUCKWORTH
A petition seeking pardon on behalf of Sam Duckworth, American convict, now serving a life sentence on the Sumter county chain gang for murder was presented Wednesday to the state prison commission.

Duckworth, according to the petition, was convicted of the murder of his wife, Mrs. Pearl Duckworth, whose body was found in a well near their home on the farm of Green A. Perry, in Pleasant Grove neighborhood, during the winter of 1912. The following day Duckworth was arrested at the home of a relative near the Dooley-Sumter county line. While in a drunken condition, he is said to have confessed the crime.

On the stand at his trial however Duckworth denied this confession and many circumstances brought out during the trial tended to show that Sidney Ware, a negro, was the actual murderer, according to the petition.
